JOHN SHAW,

MONEY MARKET.

TUESDAY EVENING.

In the discount market a distinctly firmer tendency has been apparent, on an expected large export of gold to Russia and other quarters. Three months' bills were negotiated in the morning at 3⅞ per cent., but the rate afterwards rose to 3¾. An increased amount of business was reported at the Bank of England, chiefly in trade drafts at 4 per cent., and some applications were made to that establishment for advances on paper for seven days. Money is expected to be "tight" at the end of the week through the settlement and the end of the quarter, and early next week four to five millions will, it is understood, be taken off the market by the Council for the repayment on Oct. 5 of the balance of the Indian Four per Cent. loan. Large applications to the Bank for temporary advances are consequently looked for, though decided ease will doubtless be subsequently shown, owing partly to the distribution of the dividends on the Funds on Oct. 6. Payments on the Queensland Government and Argentine Railway issues caused a good demand for day-to-day money at 3 per cent., and 3½ was paid for a somewhat longer period. Bankers will probably obtain 4½ per cent. for their Stock Exchange loans to-morrow, or ½ to ¾ more than on the last occasion. On Friday the Treasury drafts have to be arranged for, when, however, a similar total falls due. On balance only a trifling amount of gold was withdrawn from the Bank, but an efflux of £400,000 to £500,000 for St. Petersburg is expected in a day or two, and an additional large total will, it is stated, be required for South America, though shipments may be deferred for the moment. An advance in the Bank rate to 5 per cent. is more than possible; but with pending large financial operations, including the introduction of a loan for the conversion of a portion of the Argentine Debt, a movement will perhaps be delayed for the present. At New York the floating supply of money has been further increased by extensive purchases of bonds by the Treasury, and there is apparently no prospect of any shipments of bullion from this side just now. Higher rates, however, are anticipated in Paris shortly in connection with preparations for the Bourse settlement. To-day the private discount quotation in that city was 3 per cent., or ½ below the charge of the Bank of France.

A large amount of business has been done in the share markets, but the variations were irregular. In view of the settlement, 6 per cent. was paid to-day on some securities, and continuation rates will doubtless be higher all round. Nevertheless, an important rise occurred in English railways, these being still bought on an expected large increase in the traffics from improving trade. Generally there is a disposition to neglect stocks with a fixed rate of interest, and to buy those that may hereafter show increased dividends. The upward movement was helped by the failure of a broker who had large accounts open for the fall in Grand Trunks, Mexican Rails, and other securities, as well as by the result of to-day's gold operations. It is recognised that the value of money is likely to further advance, but this involves no check to the determined optimism of the moment. Amongst Home lines the Scotch stocks were extremely buoyant, and North British and Edinburgh and Glasgow rose 2½ to 3 per cent. Brighton "A" improved 1¾, and many others ½ to 1. Metropolitan and Districts, however, receded. With one or two exceptions, including Denver Preference, which rose about ½, the alterations in the American department were downward. Northern Pacific, Ohio and Mississippi, Union Pacific, and Wabash and Erie Preference were mostly sold. Dealings in these securities were very limited throughout the day, and prices closed dull. Grand Trunk Guaranteed and Preferences advanced ¼ to ½, and similar changes were observable in Mexican (Vera Cruz) stocks, partly on the closing of the "bear" operations already mentioned. The decrease in the receipts of the latter company for the past week is as much as £10,500, but this had been discounted.

Some of the international foreign bonds declined ¼ to ½ per cent. Egyptian were sold on the news that the Nile has fallen considerably. French, Hungarian, Italian, Turkish Tributes, Uruguayan, and Ecuador gave way, while Peruvian improved, mainly owing to a rumour that the Chilian Government is willing to come to terms with the bondholders. Greek, Mexican, and the Turkish Group loans were also bought. Miscellaneous and Cable securities showed firmness, and Anglo-American Ordinary and Preference were 2½ to 3 per cent. up. Many transactions took place in copper mines; Mason and Barry fluctuated between 12 and 13, and left off at 12½, or ½ higher than yesterday. On the other hand Tintos fell ⅛. Diamond shares were firm, besides Indian gold and Transvaal. Consols receded ⅛ per cent.

Sovereigns to the number of 100,000 were taken out of the Bank for Lisbon, and £92,000 in gold was sent in.

The Moor, from the Cape, has brought £12,928 in specie. The Washington has arrived at St. Nazaire from Colon and the West Indies, with £120,000, and the Oceana from Australia for London, has reached Colombo, with £44,000.

Extreme depression was again reported in the silver market, and bars at 43d and Mexican Dollars at 42d per ounce showed a fall of ⅛d. Transactions were effected at these figures. Bombay transfers declined 3-16d, and Calcutta ⅛d, to 1s 4⅛d. Bills in Hong Kong rose ⅛d, to 2s 11¼d. Four and a Half per Cent. Rupee Paper receded ⅛, to 71⅞, ½, and the Four per Cents. were ⅛ down, at 67⅞, 68.

At the Berlin Bourse Egyptian Preference and Unified, Italian, Hungarian, and Austrian Credit declined, but Spanish and Lombardo improved. The Russian rouble was nearly ⅛ higher. In Paris the movements included an advance in Panama Canal, Crédit Foncier, Turkish and Greek, and a reduction in Rio Tinto, Ottoman Bank, and Portuguese. The Three per Cent. Rentes fell 17½c, to 83f 30c, and the Four and a Half per Cents. 10c, to 105f 75c. No alteration occurred in the exchange on London.

On 'Change bills on France and Germany were in request, but no variation took place in rates. The Russian rouble was again higher.

In the return of the Imperial Bank of Germany for the week ending Sept. 22 the changes are comparatively unimportant. Bills and public deposits have diminished £440,600; notes of other banks, £72,050; advances on stocks, £20,600; sundry securities, £12,350; and Treasury notes, £4,050. Cash in hand is £271,350 less, but notes in circulation have increased £250,600; other securities, £215,700; and sundry debtors, £4,900.

According to the weekly statement of the Austro-Hungarian Bank, money has been in somewhat better demand in Vienna, though the augmentation in the other securities is not more than £387,800. Notes in circulation are larger by £239,200, while advances exhibit a decrease of £30,500, and foreign bills £500. Silver reserve shows a reduction of £6,800, and gold £900.

The Great Eastern Railway traffic return for the past week exhibits an increase of £196; the Lancashire and Yorkshire an increase of £657; and the Metropolitan District an increase of £72.

Notice is given by the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad Company that the dividend scrip issued in part payment of the distribution of Jan. 12 last will be redeemed on presentation at the offices of the company in New York on Oct. 12, with interest at 5 per ct. per annum to that date, and that it will cease to bear interest thereafter.

At a meeting to-day of the shareholders of the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul Railway Company, a resolution was passed thanking Messrs. J. S. Morgan and Co. and the English Association of American Bond and Share Holders (Limited) for so promptly coming forward for the protection of the interests of the shareholders, and recommending the deposit of shares with the association for registration in its name against the usual bearer certificates, countersigned by the London and Westminster Bank. These certificates are exchangeable for the original shares, free of cost, should they be required for sale or otherwise.

The Mexican Railway traffic receipts for the week ended Sept. 22 amounted to £5,100, against £15,600 last year, showing a decrease of £10,500. The gross earnings of the Mexican Central Railway for the third week in September were $77,513, compared with $84,555 last year, or a decrease of $7,042. For the second week in September the gross earnings of the East Tennessee, Virginia, and Georgia Railway were $111,460, against $116,006 in 1887.

Coupons due Oct. 1 on Omaha Bridge Eight per Ct. Bonds will be paid at the offices of the London and San Francisco Bank (Limited), Old Broad-street, on and after the 1st idem.

We are officially informed that Mr. Alfred James Hatch was declared a defaulter upon the Stock Exchange this day.

The annual report of the Land Company of Australasia (Limited) announces, besides the distribution for the half-year ending December last, a dividend at the rate of 10 per ct. per annum, leaving, after additions to the reserve fund, the sum of £4,216 to be carried forward.

It is intimated that the directors of Gympie Great Eastern Gold Mining Company (Limited) have received a cablegram from the mine, dated Sept. 25, giving the result obtained during the past month, viz.: "Twenty-four days' crushing, 540 tons; 1,069 ounces; value of the gold, £3,740; profit, £2,600."

For the past week the tramway traffic returns show the following differences: Increases—North Metropolitan, £606; London Street, £306; Provincial, £1,022; Belfast, £173; Southampton, £16; London Southern, £57; Woolwich and South-East London, £45; London, £374; Imperial, £53; Sunderland, £10; Swansea, £79; Dublin, £172; Gothenburg, £9; Hull, £20; Edinburgh, £211; Continental Metropolitan, £236; Bordeaux, £76; Germany, £166; Calais, £9; and South London, £47. Decreases—France, £22, and Calcutta, £65. The Anglo-Argentine Tramway receipts for the week ended Aug. 4 were £3,900, against £3,556 in 1887.

Subjoined is a copy of a cablegram received this afternoon by the Alabama Great Southern Railway Company (Limited): "Panic slowly subsiding; Alabama Great Southern freight partially resumed."

The New Zealand Agricultural Company notify that the coupons due Oct. 1 on their Mortgage Debentures may now be lodged for payment at the Union Bank of Scotland.

It is notified that the list of applications for shares in the Battery Reef Gold Mining Company (Limited) will close on Thursday for both town and country.

Hematite done at 44s 9d, 45s cash, 45s to 45s 3d month; buyers, 44s 11d cash, sellers 45s.

LIVERPOOL COTTON.—Sales of the day, 6,000 bales; on speculation and for export, 500. American dull, unchanged. East Indian steady. Egyptian fair business at unchanged prices. Middling Upland, 5 15-16d; ditto Orleans, 5 15-16d; fair Pernam, 5⅝d; ditto Brown Egyptian, 5⅛d; fair Dhollerah, 4d; good ditto, 4⅛d; fair Oomra, 4 1-16d; good ditto, 4 11-16d. Futures firmer.

MIDDLESBROUGH CLEVELAND IRON.—The market has been rather quieter, owing to the decline of Scotch iron, and there has been less doing; sellers, however, are not inclined to give way in the prices. Shipments are 66,000 tons to yesterday against 60,000 for the same time in August.—The stock of connels warrants has been reduced by 1,717 tons on the week. The prices of manufactured iron and steel are firmer. Iron ship plates are £5 10s; common bars, £5; and angles £5, less commission 2½ per cent. The price of steel plates is £7 5s; rails, £3 17s 6d. The quotation for No. 3 prompt with merchants was 34s 9d and 35s to 35s 3d; forward warrants were 34s 7½d. Makers exceed above prices in their quotations.

CORK CORN.—105cwt red wheat, 6s 6d to 6s 9d; 229cwt barley, 6s to 7s 3d; 2,057cwt black oats, 4s 6d to 4s 7d; 18cwt tawny oats, 4s 6d; 108cwt white oats, 5s to 5s 2d.

DUBLIN CORN.—Foreign wheat firmer feeling, and held for more money. Maize quiet trade, at late rates. Irish wheat, 1s to 1s 6d, to sell 18s, top quotation. Oats—Best samples sell at last days' prices, others neglected and unsaleable. Barley, no sale. Flour fair, consumptive demand. Oatmeal quiet. Bran and feeding stuffs quiet.

HULL CORN.—At to-day's market both old and new English wheat is held for the full prices of last Tuesday. Foreign inactive, at 1s per quarter decline. Barley rather easier. Oats in favour of buyers. Beans have declined 1s per quarter. Peas unaltered. Maize in fair supply, and 6d per quarter cheaper.

LIVERPOOL CORN.—Wheat market strong, with good demand, at 1d advance on Friday's prices. Flour firm. Oats and meal are nominally unchanged. Maize—A very good business has been done: Prime mixed American, 4s 6½d; Odessa, 4s 6d, 4s 6½d; cinquantino, 4s 9d, 5s 10d. Peas—Canadian, 6s 9d. Beans are quiet, no sales offering.

NEWCASTLE CORN.—English and foreign wheat quiet, at Saturday's prices. Maize 3d to 6d lower. Oats quiet, at barely late rates. Barley, beans, and peas unaltered. Flour quiet sale, at late rates.

MANCHESTER (SALFORD) CATTLE.—Supply of stock rather larger than at last market. Prime beef was scarce, and made extreme rates, but all other descriptions were worse to sell. Sheep trade quiet. Choice light weights were fully as dear, inferior sorts lower. Calves sold fairly well, at about previous prices. Cattle, 5d to 7d; sheep, 6d to 8½d; calves, 5d to 6½d per lb.

NEWCASTLE CATTLE.—No advance in rates, beef firm prices. Beef, 5s 6d to 6s per stone; mutton, 6½d to 8½d per lb.; lamb, 8d to 9½d per lb.; pork, 5s 6d to 6s 6d per stone. Numbers showing: Bee., 2,007; sheep and lambs, 7,139; pigs, 754.

PRODUCE MARKETS—TUESDAY.

SUGAR.—At auction the quantities offered of cane kinds, which were small, went off slowly, and were only partly sold, the demand being languid, viz.: about 7 casks 500 bags and pockets West India (out of 27 casks 1,617 bags and pockets offered) at 17s 9d for crystallised Trinidad, and 17s 3d to 17s 6d for crystallised St. Kitts. At public sale 153 baskets native brown Penang sold (out of 155 baskets 153 bags offered) at 12s 3d. 350 bags Central American (out of 1,534 bags offered) at 14s 6d to 15s 9d for yellow semi-grainy, and 582 bags 2,735 pockets from the Cape at 9s 6d to 11s for low to fine brown. Beetroot was rather steadier, at some improvement in values, this morning, and business was done in German 88 per cent. at 13s for Oct. and 13s 6d for Nov.-Dec., while at the close of the market the tone was firmer, at 13s (plus ⅛) for Oct. and 13s 6d (plus ⅛) for Nov.-Dec., f. o. b. In the refined market the tone was dull, at easier to, in some cases, 3d lower prices.

COFFEE.—This market was quieter, and prices, with the exception of the very finest qualities, rather easier. 1,104 packages East India mostly sold at 70s 6d to 83s 6d for small grey to good middling colory Coorg, and 92s to 103s 6d for good and fine bold, while 1,778 bags foreign went off slowly, and only 600 bags were sold at a decline. The closing quotations of future Rio were 61s cwt., 15s 9d Nov., 54s 6d Dec., 53s 3d Jan.-Feb., and 53s 6d March-June.

RICE.—Firm market, but no sales reported.

COCOA.—Better demand to-day for colonial kinds at full prices to from 1s to 2s dearer for Grenada. Of 3,600 bags offered about half sold at 74s 6d to 75s for good red Trinidad, and 83s to 85s for fine, 65s to 68s 6d for common to middling Grenada, and 68s to 71s for good to fine, and 67s to 70s for small part Guayaquil.

COFFEE.—Quiet, with sellers at late rates.

JUTE.—Firm market, and sales to a good extent made.

OILS.—Linseed—Easier at £19 5s to £19 7s 6d for pipes landed, and £19 12s 6d Hull. Rape—Unchanged, at £27 to £27 5s for pipes on spot, and £25 5s to £25 10s for refined. Cotton—Quiet, at £19 10s for crude on spot, £21 15s to £22 for refined, and £20 12s 6d Hull, being firm. Turpentine—Easier, at 33s 6d for American spirits on spot, 31s Oct.-Dec., and 32s Jan.-April. Petroleum was flat early in the day, but closed firmer, at 7½d for American on spot, 6⅞d Oct.-Dec., 6⅞d Jan.-Feb., and 6⅞d to 6⅞d for Russian on spot.

INDIAN TEA.—Messrs. Gow, Wilson, and Stanton report, under date Sept. 25: "The sales to-day comprised 426 packages Indian, 6,524 Ceylon, and 660 Java, making a total of 7,117. Indian tea sold without change at yesterday's rates. The cheapness of the lower grades was very marked. Ceylon tea, on the other hand, showed increased firmness, and last week's prices were fully maintained. The presence of a few fine invoices caused a more satisfactory quotations to be recorded. Java teas sold at previous prices. A good Bequeating invoice from the Tjiboboe estate commanded attention on account of its good flavour."

SIR G. TREVELYAN ON TEMPERANCE REFORM.

Last night Sir George Trevelyan presided, in the City Hall, Glasgow, at the annual public meeting of the Scotch Permissive Bill and Temperance Association. Sir George, who was received with loud cheers, said the cause they were assembled here to further was above party, however much its advocates found it necessary to be politicians. A reform which deserved the name of a real reform must fulfil three conditions. It must be practical, useful, and just. When he entered the House of Commons in 1865, and for some years afterwards, the great disadvantage against which the temperance party had to fight was that the world in general believed that they had no chance of ever carrying their point. All this was changed—changed absolutely, utterly, and entirely. The party who were for giving the party the control of the liquor traffic was strong, bold, energetic, and triumphant in its anticipations, so, before many years were out, it would be triumphant in its achievements. The state of things in the political world had given a great appearance of strength to the influences which were opposed to the temperance party; but that state of things was not immortal. In politics nothing was immortal except great and salutary principles. The country was with them now, just as five-and-twenty years ago what was then called the country was against them, and the cause of the change was not far to seek. This was the people's question, and five-and-twenty years ago the people had little or no voice in the government of the country. Every brewer had a vote, every distiller had a vote, or perhaps a dozen; every publican had a vote, every ground landlord whose thousand pound house by the grant of a licence became in the twinkling of an eye a five thousand pound house, had a vote; but the classes of which these men made their wealth had no vote. In 1867 the working classes got the franchise in the towns, and immediately the temperance question became important in Parliament. In 1885 the working classes got the franchise in the counties, and the temperance cause received another deep and mighty impulse, which would not lose its force until it had carried them to complete and durable victory. (Cheers.) So much for this reform being practicable, but was it a useful and beneficent reform? As to that they could speak positively and from practical experience. There was a district in an English county where forty years ago the landowner, from conscientious convictions, refused to apply for the renewal of a licence for any of the public-houses on his estate, and a generation had grown up that knew nothing of the retail sale of liquor. What was the result? The money which used to go to the public-house for a whole generation had gone to furniture, clothing, good wholesome food, to the savings bank, to the insurance offices. To the best of his belief there was not a single halfpenny of poor relief given over the whole district, and yet the people had to pay the rates for the poor in districts that had not been wise enough to follow their example. Why should not the people of every district in the Kingdom—town and country alike—be able to do for themselves what in this case had been done for them by others? But it was not enough for a measure to be practicable and useful; it must likewise be just or they would have none of it. It was often said that if they had local option they would then have one law for the rich and another for the poor. But it was the exact opposite. The upper classes bought what wine and beer they wanted and consumed it at home; they would never consent to have a public-house close at hand into which their sons and servants could go and drink. One law for the rich and another for the poor! Imagine the Duke of Westminster turning the corner houses of Belgrave and Grosvenor squares into gin palaces! Yet, if he did so, the inhabitants of these aristocratic regions would only be living under the same conditions of life as the enormous mass of the people of this country were obliged to live, whether they liked it or not. The Local Government Bill was made the occasion for starting and ventilating a privilege which, if once it was accepted, would put an end for ever to temperance reform. That proposal, if carried into effect, would saddle this unhappy country, burdened enough already, with a fresh National Debt of enormous magnitude. It would be a debt that would have to be paid off before the people could get the control of the traffic into their own hands; but they would be unable to pay it off, and in consequence they would have to make good the interest till the end of time.

THE HAVERSTOCK-HILL TUNNEL TRAGEDY.

At the Marylebone Police-court, yesterday, James Mackill, aged twenty-one, described as a fitter, of Wood Lea, Portland Park, Hamilton, Lanarkshire, was brought before Mr. Cooke, charged with causing the death of John King by throwing him out of a train at the Haverstock-hill tunnel of the Midland Railway on the 11th inst. Mr. Freke Palmer defended; Mr. Young watched the case for the Midland Railway Company.

William Franklin, a platelayer in the employ of the Midland Railway Company, having given evidence as to the finding of the body,

John Mathieson, a ship's fireman, said he left Tilbury on the 11th, and started from St. Pancras Station about 9.15 at night in the same compartment as the prisoner and King and another man, whose name he did not know. Witness got out of the carriage at Kentish Town, leaving the three men behind.

Inspector Banister interposed, and said the witness's statement was at variance with a previous account he had given.

Witness, continuing, said King and the prisoner had a "few words" while he was with them, but witness saw no blows, and he kept them from quarrelling.

Cross-examined: The "few words" was an argument. Witness had been drinking heavily, and was drunk.

Thomas Banister, Detective-inspector, S Division, said that on the 21st inst. he went with Superintendent Miller, of the Hamilton Police, to the father of the prisoner at Wood Lea. He saw the prisoner there, and they went to the local police office. Witness told the accused he (witness) was a police-officer from London, and was making inquiries about John King being discovered dead on the railway in London, and some shirts found on the line. The prisoner said, "I had my shirt on when I arrived here in Hamilton." At the police superintendent's office a statement which had been made by a man named Hugh Meikle, of Kilmarnock, was read to the accused, who said he wished to make a statement.

Mr. Palmer objected to the reading of the statement, which was of a damaging nature, but Mr. Cooke said he could not exclude it.

The inspector continuing read the statement made by Hugh Meikle, as follows: On Wednesday morning, the 12th inst., at about seven a.m., I entered a third-class carriage at Kilmarnock for Glasgow with John Cowan. There was a man in the carriage before we entered, aged twenty-five to thirty, no moustache or whiskers, about 5ft 5in high, medium build, hair cut short (between colours), dress loose, rather dark mixture coat, dark very long trousers, white or grey felt hat, soft lace boots, no shirt. Shortly after the train started he commenced to speak to us, and after drinking some whisky from a bottle, he offered us some, which we declined. He then spoke of the colonies, saying he came as a stowaway from Sydney. He said he travelled in the carriage we were in with a man from London, that the man and he quarrelled and they fought, and that he ultimately put the other man out of the window. He said his shirt was torn and stained with blood, so he took it off and threw it out of the window. He at the same time opened his coat, and I saw that he had no shirt on. He was the worse for drink. I saw blood on the carriage door and on the floor, and the man had the appearance of having recently received a blow on the right cheek. He spoke of the man as if he did not know him. He did not say what they quarrelled about. He went with us as far as Glasgow. He told us his father was a chemist in Hamilton, and he was going to Paisley-road before going home. I thought he was only boasting when he said he had put a man out of the train, and for that reason took no steps. I afterwards saw the account of the inquest, and it then struck me that the deceased had been put out of the train by the man with whom we travelled, and I therefore went to the police at Glasgow and gave information."

The prisoner replied: "I knew the man you speak of to be a passenger in the same boat as I. He was at St. Pancras Station very much the worse for drink. I got into the train and fell asleep at once as I had been drinking, and I don't know whether any one else got into the carriage. When I awoke they were taking tickets, the railway official shook me and woke me up, and I did not sleep in the train any more. I said nothing to any men about what is contained in the statement you have just read. On arriving at Glasgow I sold the shirt I was wearing to a stranger for a shilling to get drink. On Wednesday afternoon I was locked up at Southside, Glasgow, for being drunk, and was sentenced to five days' imprisonment, and was released on Monday morning. I knew nothing about the death of King or his having met with any misfortune until I was told of it on arriving home at Hamilton. This statement I have made is entirely voluntary, and of my own desire. I sold the shirt to a man in the street." Witness suggested that prisoner should voluntarily remain under observation while witness made further inquiry.

Mr. Cooke: Could he have gone away if he had liked?

Witness: Oh, no, your worship.

Mr. Cooke: You call that "voluntarily," do you? (Laughter.)

Witness, continuing, said he took the accused to Glasgow to meet John Cowan and Hugh Meikle, and there Mackill was placed amongst seven others, and those persons at once identified him. Witness also read to the prisoner a statement which Cowan had made. It was similar in effect to that made by Meikle.

Mr. Cooke: Has any shirt been found?

Inspector Banister: Yes, your worship; by the railway men.

Witness further stated that he continued the inquiry and brought the prisoner to London on Monday last. On Sunday a witness named Turnbull attended the police-office to see the defendant, about whom he had made a statement, and they at once greeted each other and commenced talking. Witness stopped that, and said the man had identified the hat the prisoner had as belonging to the deceased, and Mackill said that was quite right. On the way to London the prisoner said "It is a pity I don't know who I sold my shirt to in Glasgow. I know that's the dead man's hat. I told them at home it was not mine. I had a cap. I don't know what became of mine." That cap, the witness added, had been found. The statement as to his being locked up at Glasgow he found to be correct, and then the prisoner had 1s 10d on him.

Cross-examined by Mr. Palmer the inspector said he held a very strong opinion that the cause of the deceased's death was due to accident until he heard of the statements made by the Scotch witnesses. Those statements were not known when the coroner's inquiry was held.

After some evidence as to the finding of the prisoner's shirt, the further hearing was adjourned.

With regard to the disturbance on Monday night at the Court Theatre, Mr. Walter Emden writes: "The real difficulty in the pit exit is that the pit is small. On the first night there was a much larger number of people desiring to enter than the pit would accommodate, and besides this there was a certain number of people who were evidently desirous of getting into the theatre without paying, and with this view made a rush. There are only seventeen steps from the street to the pit floor, and although the pit only accommodates 150 persons there are two 4ft 6in staircases to it. Means will be taken by the management in future to guard against a similar rush."

SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

NEWMARKET NOTES.

The Autumn campaign at Newmarket commenced in somewhat dull and quiet fashion. The bright weather enjoyed almost throughout September was replaced by cold winds and a leaden sky, and the fears entertained of a wet day considerably affected the strength of the attendance. That matters will improve even during the present week is much to be desired, seeing that the Heath has no rival all the world over as a racecourse, and Newmarket has from time immemorial been looked upon in the light of the metropolis of the Turf. The card hardly yielded the promised amount of sport, and the only instances of good fields were when eleven did battle for the First Nursery, and the same number for the Maiden Plate. In both cases the winners were well backed, and there was not the least approach to the success of an outsider throughout the afternoon. Kingsclere drew first blood in the All-Aged Trial Stakes, as, in the absence of Hugo and Banter, the Duke of Westminster's colours were placed in the van by Dornoch. Although he ran a little straighter than in the Scarborough Stakes the exhibition was not a generous one, and he owed the verdict, perhaps, to the fact that Ripon and Greville are similarly deficient in courage. Dornoch was knocked down under the hammer to Tom Cannon for 410 guineas, and his attention will, doubtless, be turned to jumping practice. Easily as Trap-door won last week at Manchester she found the company different in the Selling Plate for two-year-olds on the Rous Course, and finished fourth and last. Extortion, who had not been seen since Lewes, was warmly opposed in the market by Ketta, and the race proved a good thing for Mr. Rothschild's filly. At the same time she is built on only a small scale, and was allowed, therefore, to change hands to Mr. Fenwick for 470 guineas. Donovan, who has put on a lot of flesh dating from his last appearance at Goodwood, had been recently suffering from a sore back. His solitary opponent was Unrefined, and as Donovan won the whole of the way there was some talk of his going to the post again for the Boscawen Stakes. He did not attempt, however, the double event landed by Seabreeze last year, and allowed an old antagonist—Gold—to walk over. Judging from his present appearance Donovan will fail to trouble Chitabob seriously in the Middle Park Plate, and Gold is by no means growing into a nice colt, as he goes off very slack behind the saddle. In the First Nursery over the last five furlongs of the Abingdon Mile Waterfall did not avail herself of the opportunity of renewing the Sandown Park strife with Laureate. Perhaps this was a wise discretion, as, to judge from the smart performance of Mr. Hammond's colt, he has made no little improvement during the past fortnight. His strong favouritism was justified every yard of the way, and, with the apprentice-ridden L'Avare second, Ormus, Poem, and Unco Guid alone showed speed of the remainder. Of the dozen in the Great Foal Stakes, for whom the weights had been declared over night, Love-in-Idleness, Zariba, Nina, and Dolores did not turn up. Ravensthorpe, the only maiden of the party, proved an unworthy substitute for the first-named, as he was tailed off with Queen's Counsel long before reaching the Bushes. In spite of his penalty Ayrshire to had all outward appearances a very comfortable task. Grafton looked a little the worse for his Doncaster and Manchester struggles, while Ossory had been stopped in his work by the severe hock cuts he received in the St. Leger. The dislike shown by Ayrshire to canter to the post by himself caused plenty of fielding at an average of 9 to 4 on, but the others could never stretch him, and he won easily from Grafton and Surbiton. The wagering was confined to three of the eleven starters for the Maiden Plate—namely, Mascarade, Claribelle, and Shylock. Of these Claribelle, who repeated the triumph of Diana in the same colours last year, seems to stay thoroughly well. The curtain dropped at the top of the town, and the reports that Rêve d'Or was not in form caused Isosceles to have quite as many friends for the Thirty-ninth Triennial. That was all he could boast of, as in the race Rêve d'Or never required the slightest squeezing, and sailed home in capital style. Still, the beating of Isosceles did not amount to much, and before dinner 25 to 1 was on offer for the Cesarewitch, with inquiries for The Cob, in the same stable. Trayles was in better odour than he had been for the last day or two, and as Danbydale touched 10 to 1 for the Cambridgeshire Minting declined to 11 to 2, with 600 to 100 once laid.

To-morrow's card will embrace nine events, and my selections are—DEVIL'S DANCE for the Fourth Zetland Stakes, HEPTARCHY for the Sweepstakes (B.S.C.), CEDAR or YARD ARM for the Granby Plate, THE SHREW or MONSIEUR DE PARIS for the Great Eastern Railway Handicap, HARPAGON for the Selling Plate, DONOVAN or, in his absence, EMERALD for the Hopeful Stakes; POLYNESIA or MONT D'OR for the Welter Handicap, SYMPHONY for the Second Nursery, and RADA for the Fortieth Triennial. HOTSPUR.

NEWMARKET FIRST OCTOBER MEETING.

TUESDAY.

The ALL-AGED TRIAL STAKES of 10 sovs each, with 100 added; weight for age, with selling and other allowances; entrance 3 sovs. R.M. (1 mile 17 yards). 7 subs.
Duke of Westminster's Dornoch, by Sterling—Goletta, 3 yrs, 8st (£300) (T. Cannon, jun.) 1
Mr. J. Hammond's Ripon, 5 yrs, 8st 7lb (£500) (F. Barrett) 2
Mr. M. Dawson's Greville, 2 yrs, 6st (£300) (G. Chaloner) 3
Prince Soltykoff's Bethsaida, 5 yrs, 7st 11lb (£100) (J. Woodburn) 0
(Winner trained by Porter.)
Betting—7 to 4 agst Dornoch, 2 to 1 agst Ripon, and 9 to 4 agst Greville.
Greville held a slight lead of Dornoch, with Ripon next to the Bushes, where Dornoch took up the running, and shaking off the challenge of Ripon and Greville, won a fine race by a head, which distance separated Ripon and Greville. The winner was sold to Mr. T. Cannon for 410 guineas.

A SELLING PLATE of 105 sovs, for two-yr-olds; colts, 9st; fillies, 8st 11lb; winner to be sold for 200 sovs; entrance 3 sovs. Rous Course (5 furlongs). 9 entries. Closed Sept. 18.
Mr. L. de Rothschild's Ketta, by Kisber—Boerna, 8st 11lb (F. Barrett) 1
Mr. H. E. Beddington's Extortion, 9st (T. Cannon) 2
Lord Spencer's f by Thurio—Miss McLeod, 8st 11lb (T. Cannon, jun.) 3
Lord Calthorpe's Trap-door, 8st 11lb (Robinson) 0
(Winner trained by Hayhoe.)
Betting—15 to 8 each agst Extortion and Ketta, 5 to 1 agst Trap-door, and 11 to 2 agst Miss McLeod filly.
Extortion made play, followed by Trap-door, with Ketta at the heels of the favourite, to the distance, where Trap-door and the Miss McLeod filly were beaten, and Ketta waited on the favourite into the Abingdon-hill Bottom, when she drew out and won by a length and a half; three-parts of a length between second and third. The winner was sold to Mr. H. T. Fenwick for 470 guineas.

The BUCKENHAM STAKES of 300 sovs each, h. ft, for two-yr-olds; colts, 8st 12lb; fillies, 8st 9lb; one to the post. T.Y.C. 6 subs.
Duke of Portland's Donovan, by Galopin—Mowerina, 9st 12lb (F. Barrett) 1
Prince Soltykoff's Unrefined, 8st 9lb (T. Cannon) 2
(Winner trained by G. Dawson.)
Betting—100 to 15 on Donovan.
Donovan travelled faster than his opponent throughout, and won pulling double by three lengths.

The FIRST NURSERY PLATE (handicap) of 215 sovs, for two-yr-olds; winners extra; the second received 20 sovs out of the plate; entrance 3 sovs. Last 5 furlongs of Ab. M. 36 entries.
Mr. J. Hammond's Laureate, by Petrarch—Macaria, 7st 11lb (Warne) 1
Gen. O. Williams's L'Avare, 6st 2lb (allowed 5lb) (Hibbert) 2
Duke of Westminster's Ormus, 7st 5lb (M. Cannon) 3
Lord Dudley's Poem, 6st (G. Barrett) 0
Capt. Laing's Padua, 8st (S. Loates) 0
Mr. T. Jennings's George, 7st 4lb (J. Woodburn) 0
Lord Durham's Spate, 6st 10lb (Blake) 0
Mr. F. Sanson's Tremolo, 6st 12lb (Wall) 0
Mr. F. Lawson's Elixir, 6st 10lb (allowed 5lb) (H. Panter) 0
Mr. R. H. Combe's Unco Guid, 6st 10lb (car 6st 11lb) (T. Loates) 0
Major H. Walpole's Caste, 6st 2lb (allowed 5lb) (A. Martin) 0
(Winner trained by Waugh.)
Betting—11 to 8 agst Laureate, 5 to 1 agst Unco Guid, 6 to 1 agst Padua, 10 to 1 each agst George, Ormus, Poem, and Tremolo, and 20 to 1 each agst L'Avare and Spate.
After a slight delay the flag fell to a good start, and Unco Guid settled down clear of Laureate, Poem, Padua, and L'Avare on the left, with Ormus on the right, in front of Tremolo and Spate. As the Bushes Unco Guid was beaten, and Laureate, taking up the running, had the race in hand, and won in a canter by a neck; a head third. Unco Guid was fourth, Poem fifth, Padua sixth, Tremolo seventh, George eighth, Caste ninth, and Spate last.

The BOSCAWEN STAKES of 100 sovs each, for two-yr-olds; colts, 8st 12lb; fillies, 8st 9lb; 5lb breeding allowance; one to the post. T.Y.C.
Prince Soltykoff's Gold, by Sterling—Lucetta, 8st (T. Cannon) w.o.

The TENTH GREAT FOAL STAKES of 25 sovs each, 10 ft, with 750 added, for three-yr-olds; colts, 8st 12lb; fillies, 8st 9lb; the second received 300 sovs, and the third 200 sovs, and the nominator of the winner 100 sovs out of the stakes; penalties and allowances. A.F. (1 mile 2 furlongs).
Duke of Portland's Ayrshire, by Hampton—Atalanta, 9st 5lb (F. Barrett) 1
Sir G. Chetwynd's Grafton, 8st 12lb (F. Webb) 2
Captain Laing's Surbiton, 8st 12lb (G. Barrett) 3
Lord Hastings's Queen Counsel, 8st 12lb (S. Loates) 0
Mr. J. H. Houldsworth's Arrandale, 8st 12lb (Warne) 0
Prince Soltykoff's Ravensthorpe, 8st 12lb (Robinson) 0
Duke of Westminster's Ossory, 8st 12lb (T. Cannon) 0
Lord Zetland's Caerlaverock, 8st 12lb (Rickaby) 0
(Winner trained by G. Dawson.)
Betting—9 to 4 on Ayrshire, 6 to 1 agst Ossory, 10 to 1 agst Grafton, 100 to 6 agst Caerlaverock, 20 to 1 agst Arrandale, and 25 to 1 agst Surbiton.
After two breaks away the signal was given, and Surbiton on the left made play from Queen's Counsel, Ravensthorpe, and Caerlaverock on the right, with Grafton in the centre, and Ayrshire waiting at the heels of the right hand lot. Little change occurred until nearing the Bushes, where Ravensthorpe and Queen's Counsel were beaten, and Grafton took up the running, attended by Surbiton, Ossory, and Ayrshire, with Caerlaverock close up. Ossory was well beaten nearing the foot of the hill, and rising out of the Abingdon Mile Bottom Ayrshire drew to the front and won in a canter by a length; half a length between second and third. Caerlaverock was fourth, Ossory fifth, Arrandale sixth, and Ravensthorpe last.

A MAIDEN PLATE of 105 sovs, for two-yr-olds; colts, 9st; fillies, 8st 11lb; entrance 3 sovs. Bretby Stakes Course (6 furlongs).
Lord Rodney's Claribelle, by Uncas or Beauclerc—Griselle, 8st 11lb (Robinson) 1
Mr. B. Sherrard's Shylock, 9st (Webb) 2
Mr. Fawcett's Ringfield, 9st (G. Barrett) 3
Mr. Abington's Hagios, 9st (S. Loates) 0
Mr. Chaloner's f by Cymbal—Rosy, 8st 11lb (R. Chaloner) 0
Mr. G. Dawson's Nota, 8st 11lb (Morgan) 0
Lord Gerard's Westerns, 9st (T. Cannon) 0
Mr. Naylor's General Abbott, 9st (J. Woodburn) 0
Baron de Rothschild's Mascarade, 8st 11lb (F. Barrett) 0
Prince Soltykoff's Alastor, 9st (Goater) 0
Mr. J. Waugh's Negligent, 9st (Wainwright) 0
(Winner trained by Jewitt.)
Betting—7 to 4 each agst Mascarade and Claribelle, 5 to 1 agst Shylock, and 10 to 1 agst Ringfield.
Ringfield was first off and made the running from Claribelle, Shylock, and Mascarade, with Ray filly, Alastor, and Negligent next for half the journey, when Claribelle drew away and won in a canter by four lengths; the same between second and third. Mascarade was fourth, Hagios fifth, Ray filly sixth, Negligent seventh, and Alastor last.

The THIRD YEAR of the THIRTY-NINTH TRIENNIAL PRODUCE STAKES of 10 sovs each, h. ft, with 200 added, and 50 sovs for the breeder of the winner; for four-yr-olds; colts, 9st; fillies, 8st 11lb; the second received 10 per cent. and the third 5 per cent. on the whole stake. Entrance 3 sovs. D.I. (2 miles 105 yards).
Duke of Beaufort's Rêve d'Or, by Hampton—Queen of the Roses, 8st 11lb (G. Barrett) 1
Lord Hartington's Isosceles, 9st (Woodburn) 2
Mr. R. H. Combe's The Tyke, 9st (Rickaby) 3
Lord Bradford's Fretwork, 8st 11lb (F. Barrett) 0
(Winner trained by Taylor.)
Betting—6 to 4 each agst Rêve d'Or and Isosceles, and 5 to 1 agst Fretwork.
Isosceles showed the way from Fretwork with Rêve d'Or last, to the turn of the lands, where Fretwork took up the running from Isosceles, and Rêve d'Or drew into third place. Fretwork had compounded at the post and left the issue to Rêve d'Or and Isosceles, of whom the former won in a canter by half a length; a bad third.

CRICKET TEAM FOR THE CAPE.—Subjoined is a correct list of the men chosen to uphold the credit of England at the Cape, and, judging by its composition, it is safe to predict a successful tour. The fourteen amateurs and professionals sail for Cape Town, in the Royal Mail steamer Roslin Castle, on Nov. 22, and will, on their arrival there, play a series of matches during Christmas and New Year's weeks. The tour is in no way a commercial speculation, but is undertaken purely as a matter of sport. The names of the team are: Major Warton, the Hon. C. Coventry, and Messrs. C. A. Smith, M. P. Bowden, J. H. Roberts, B. A. F. Grieve, E. M'Master, and J. Williams, with Lohmann, M. Read, Abel, Briggs, Fothergill, and F. Hearne.

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately-flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold in labelled packets.—[ADVT.]

STRANDING OF A STEAMSHIP.—The Allan liner Grecian, which went ashore on the Ayrshire coast on Sunday morning, still lies stranded in the same position. Several hundred tons of her cargo were discharged into lighters on Monday night, and two powerful tugs, assisted by the vessel's own engines, attempted to tow her off, but without success.

FEVER EPIDEMIC.—At a meeting of the Schull, co. Cork, Board of Guardians yesterday, a telegram was received from the chief officer of the Coastguard at Crookhaven stating that fever of a virulent type was raging there, and requesting instructions in regard to vessels arriving in the harbour. The guardians decided that the Coastguard be requested to warn all vessels of the existence of the epidemic.

GERMAN COURT AND POLITICS.

THE DISPUTED "DIARY."

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]
BERLIN, Sept. 25.

The Kaiser left Potsdam early this afternoon for Detmold, attended by the Chief Court-Marshal von Liebenau, Count von Pückler, and his Aide-de-Camp Major von Kessel. The Kaiserin, accompanied by her brother, Duke Ernst Gunther of Schleswig-Holstein, and her children, started earlier for Primkenau for a fortnight's visit.

At eleven, Count Herbert von Bismarck made his report to the Kaiser; at 11.45 his Majesty saw his august consort off at the station, and by noon he was closeted with the Chancellor, who arrived suddenly in Berlin last night.

Naturally Prince von Bismarck's flying visit to the capital—for he was to return to-night to Friedrichsruh—is much talked of as having some special object. Doubtless it has long been planned; but as usual settled at the last moment, for nothing is more natural than that Prince von Bismarck should pay his respects to the Kaiser before his Majesty starts on the highly-important round of visits that he commences to-day.

It is whispered that the Chancellor came up in connection with the publication in the Deutsche Rundschau. I should question this. I have spoken to-day with some well-informed persons who were in the Royal circles in France at the time of the Franco-German War, and have seen the original "diary." I am in a position to deny absolutely that Herr von Roggenbach—who was an intimate friend of the late Kaiser Friedrich—committed the indiscretion of handing the materials to the Deutsche Rundschau for their articles. Many of the facts reported are correct, and the leading idea of the then Crown Prince's turn of mind, which was no secret, is pretty correctly represented, but there is much that is inaccurate—much that is actually false, according to my authority, and considerable chronological errors in the alleged "diary." The story about the King of Bavaria is, I am assured, quite false. It was intimated to his Majesty that if he did not take the initiative somebody else would do so, and that he had better take the lead; but Prince von Bismarck neither suggested, nor dictated, nor wrote the letter sent by King Ludwig. It is believed that the author of what has appeared in the Review took down much from memory or filled up what he had copied from the original with his own matter, and it is said that the son of a well-known personage—a German who enjoyed Royal favour abroad—is the culpable party. Anyhow, too much importance has been attached to the publication, for it is not a full or an accurate copy of the original.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]
BERLIN, Sept. 25.

Some of this evening's papers announce that the publication of the late Emperor's diary will be made the subject of an exhaustive inquiry on the part of the Government.

Dr. von Schlözer, the Prussian Minister to the Vatican, has left for Rome.

THE EUROPEAN SITUATION.

GREEK NOTE TO THE PORTE.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]
BERLIN, Sept. 25.

The Kaiser's journey to Vienna and Rome will soon preoccupy men's minds. I have the best authority for affirming that Count Kalnoky took away with him from Friedrichsruh the full assurance that Germany has not the slightest intention of exercising pressure on Austria in the matter of the Eastern Question, which she regards as affecting Austrian interests and not hers. If Russia should attack Austria, Germany would intervene in aid of her ally, but how Russia and Austria are to settle their Eastern differences will be practically left to themselves. In any case, the chances for peace are the best possible for the present.

The extraordinarily festive and hearty reception Kaiser Wilhelm will meet with in Vienna and Rome may provoke jealousy elsewhere, but it is unlikely, under existing circumstances, that any bellicose feelings will be thereby aroused.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]
CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 25.

M. Condouriotis, the Greek Minister, has presented to the Porte a Note from his Government, making serious remonstrances against the action of the Turkish authorities at Rhodes and Chios, who had illegally seized Greek sponge-fishing vessels in spite of their having paid the required duties.

The Note also demands the release of the vessels and the payment of an indemnity to the owners, and, in conclusion, expresses the hope that similar acts will be prevented in the future, Greece being desirous of maintaining friendly relations with the Porte.

VIENNA, Sept. 25.

The King of Greece paid a visit of half an hour's duration to Count Kalnoky, at the Foreign Office, to-day.

GERMANY AND ZANZIBAR.

[TELEGRAM FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]
PARIS, Sept. 25.

A Zanzibar telegram forwarded to-day to an evening paper says that two German customs-officials and their servants have been massacred at Quiloa by the natives. The English missionaries in the interior of Africa have been recalled, and the East-Indians, who are British subjects and were settled on the coast, have been sent back to Zanzibar.

The Dispatch adds that the German Admiral is at Bagamoyo.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]
ZANZIBAR, Sept. 25.

The coast tribes, who attacked the German settlement at Bagamoyo on the 22nd inst., have retreated inland, and it is reported that a German force will be sent in pursuit in order to punish them.

SIKKIM AND THE THIBETANS.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]
SIMLA, Sept. 25.

Colonel Graham has attacked the Thibetans in the Jelapla Pass, and completely defeated them, capturing their camp.

The Thibetans lost 400 killed and wounded.

On the British side Colonel Bromhead lost his right arm, and nine Sepoys were wounded.

Colonel Graham is now advancing upon Rinchigong, in the Chumbi Valley, which is in Thibetan territory.

NEWS FROM VIENNA.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]
VIENNA, Sept. 25.

The Political Correspondence publishes a telegram from Sofia stating that, after the manoeuvres near Shumla, Prince Ferdinand issued a decree to the Bulgarian army expressing his warm recognition of the efficiency displayed by all the branches of the service.

PESTH, Sept. 25.

The alarming rumours which gained currency in Vienna last night that an extensive fire had broken out in the Royal Opera House here were groundless. They probably originated in the fact that two baskets filled with wood shavings caught fire in the workshop attached to the theatre; but the flames were immediately extinguished without the assistance of the fire-brigade.

INVESTMENT OF SUAKIN.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAM.]
CAIRO, Sept. 25.

General Sir F. Grenfell and Colonel Kitchener, who are on their way back to Egypt from England, will proceed at once on their arrival here to Suakin.

Further reinforcements, which may include some cavalry, will probably be sent thither shortly.

General Dormer, who commands the British troops in Egypt, will start in a few days with his Staff for Wady-Halfa.

UNITED STATES.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Twelve cases of yellow fever have been reported at Fernandina, East Florida. The situation at Decatur has somewhat improved, and the inhabitants are regaining confidence. The running of many trains to Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Southern Kentucky has been abandoned, owing to the panic prevailing among the people of the towns, who maintain a rigid quarantine, and the railway officials state that the traffic will be restored only when the panic has subsided. The postmaster at Cairo, Illinois, has telegraphed to the Government that the country below that place is in the hands of a howling mob, and that quarantine prevails everywhere.

The appearance of yellow fever at Fernandina, East Florida, is officially declared.

JACKSONVILLE, Sept. 25.—123 fresh cases of yellow fever were recorded here yesterday.

AMERICAN MARKETS.

[REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Stocks opened steady, but subsequently became irregular. The market closed generally weak. Money, easy. Petroleum, Sugar, and Iron firm, but quiet. Flour, firm and active. Tin, dull.

PRICES FOR FUTURE DELIVERY.

NEW YORK, Sept. 25.—Wheat was strong and excited at the opening, with values 1¼ to 1½ up, with early sales of December at 104½ and May 108¼. The market advanced quickly to 109 for May, with a bullish feeling. Firmer cable advices, coupled with heavy buying for Western and North-Western traders, caused the advance. Shorts covered freely. Export trading small. Speculative trading heavy. The closing tone is strong, 2c to 2½c dearer.

Sales, futures, 16,256,000 bushels; spot, 73,000 bushels. Receipts, 110,000 bushels; same day last year, 150,212 bushels. Clearances, 60,000 bushels.

RAILWAY ARRANGEMENTS.

The London, Brighton, and South Coast and Western of France Railway Companies have decided to continue their double or daily tidal service each way between Newhaven and Dieppe, with corresponding trains on either side in connection with the boats, up to and including the 10th proximo, instead of the service terminating at the end of the present month, as originally fixed. The two new steamships the Rouen and the Paris, luxuriously fitted, will continue to perform the day service up to the date named, the journey between Newhaven and Dieppe being accomplished by these vessels in a little over three hours.

An important alteration is announced by the London, Chatham, and Dover Railway Company in their continental service viâ Queenborough and Flushing. On and after Oct. 1 the boat express train in connection with the day mail boat to Flushing, will leave Victoria Station at 7.50 a.m. instead of 7.15 a.m., as hitherto. The night mail service will undergo no alteration, leaving at 8.30 p.m. as usual; and the departure from Holborn Viaduct and St. Paul's (City stations) is five minutes earlier in each case.

The trips to Portsmouth and round the Isle of Wight having proved so attractive this season, the South-Western Railway Company have arranged to run another excursion on Saturday, the 29th inst., leaving Waterloo at 7.10 a.m., and calling at the principal stations.

TRAGIC END TO A SERIOUS CHARGE.—Edward Seal, aged seventy-three, a fishmonger, of Basingstoke, who was charged on Saturday morning last, under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, with criminally assaulting his maidservant, Alice Taylor, aged thirteen, and was remanded on bail, committed suicide yesterday morning by hanging himself to a bedpost. His solicitor stated in Court yesterday that he could have conclusively proved his client's innocence. The prosecution, he said, was a malicious one, brought by a girl possessed of a vicious and sensual imagination in revenge for Mr. Seal's having discharged her from his service for theft.

THE NEW WIMBLEDON.

At the close of two and a half hours of discussion, Lord Wantage, on behalf of the Council of the National Rifle Association, yesterday handed to the press a statement of its views upon the question which the members had been called together specially to settle. The document set out that on Aug. 9 the Council had considered various sites for their annual prize meeting, and that they had then adjourned to the 22nd of the same month, when, on the motion of Captain Pixley, it was agreed that the selection between Cannock Chase and the Berkshire Downs should be made on Sept. 25. A committee of investigation with regard to these two sites was appointed, and accordingly the report of this committee was presented yesterday and considered. In many respects it was unfavourable to Cannock Chase. It laid stress upon the alleged disadvantages of soil, difficulty of approach, the distance from London, and other matters which have been already dealt with in these columns. A comparison was also made between Cannock and Berkshire, and the superiority of the latter was advocated. The Council also received a deputation from Staffordshire, introduced by Lord Hatherton, and consisting of Colonel Mort, Major Bonney, Captain Bagnall, and Mr. Powell. The deputation laid before the Council statistics showing that the number of volunteers who had declared in favour of Cannock Chase amounted to 61,524, and in favour of Berkshire, 31,197, the neutrals being 11,507. The total of 104,228, they said, represented more than half the number of volunteers in the kingdom. Of those who approved of the Chase forty-seven battalions notified their intention of sending an increased number of representatives to the meeting if held at Cannock, against five battalions if held at Compton. Of those in favour of Berkshire only one battalion would send a reduced number to Cannock, whilst of those who supported the Chase twelve battalions would delegate a reduced number to attend the meeting if it took place at Compton. Fourteen of the Scotch counties had declared for Cannock, two for Compton, and three were neutral. The English counties who supported the Staffordshire site included Lancashire, with an enrolled strength of 26,070 volunteers, and Yorkshire, with a total of 15,237, as compared with Middlesex, 19,043.

After prolonged deliberation, in the course of which the importance of studying the views of the volunteers of the metropolis and of the southern counties was insisted upon, a resolution in favour of the Berkshire Downs was moved by Captain Pixley, to which Lord Wemyss proposed the following amendment, which was carried: "That, before finally adopting either the Berkshire or the Cannock sites, it is desirable to give further time for inquiry as to the possibilities of obtaining a suitable site within a reasonable distance of the metropolis, and that a committee be appointed to communicate with the Government and ascertain whether they would assist the National Rifle Association to obtain a new site for their annual rifle meeting." This decision was arrived at by a full meeting of the Council, the following being present: Colonel Lord Wantage (chairman), Colonel Sir H. Fletcher, M.P. (vice-chairman), Captain Pixley, Colonel Sir H. Halford, Colonel Sir H. Wilmot, Colonel Burt, Mr. Martin Smith, Lord Bury, Lieutenant-Colonel Marsden, General Sir W. M. M'Murdo, Major-General Philip Smith, Earl Waldegrave, Mr. G. T. Biddulph, Major Waller, Lieutenant-Colonel Walrond, M.P., and Mr. H. Whitehead. Of the absentees, letters were received from Major Knox, the Earl of Wharncliffe, Earl Brownlow, and Mr. W. Wells. The Lord Advocate, the Earl of Lathom, and the Earl of Pembroke were not present. It is understood that the resolution of the council reopens the whole question. The Council are naturally anxious, as are all their friends, to obtain, if possible, a suitable ground within the metropolitan district, but up to the present time no one has been able to discover such. What appears to be the real state of the case is this: That while the Council and their advisers have given very close attention to one or two favoured spots, there has been only a partial and casual inspection of the Brighton sites. When the great advantage of the South Downs was pointed out in these columns no particular acreage was marked out as the absolutely best position of the butts and firing points, but it was indicated that there existed a wide area within three miles from Brighton which would provide ranges at no very great expense, suitable for the purposes of the annual meeting. Had some members of the Council with experts carefully examined the district around Patcham, within reach of the proposed new station on the London, Brighton, and South-Coast Railway, there is very little doubt that the difficulties which were supposed to exist would have vanished as the smoke from a rifle. It is therefore to be hoped that while the Council and their allies are searching around London for what there is little reason to believe they will find, they will take the present opportunity of ascertaining for themselves why the land which has been so favourably judged of by others should not be selected. Although the authorities at Brighton have made some show of assistance, they have certainly not taken up the matter very warmly on behalf of their fellow-townsmen, and there is reason to suppose that, had the local committee there been more active, much greater attention would have been given to the proposal. An extraordinary idea seems to have possessed certain members of the Association that the advocacy of this particular ground was influenced by some other than the simple desire to aid the Volunteers in the discovery of a new Wimbledon. The report that anyone, at Brighton or London, was selfishly interested in the purchase of such land is too childish to be seriously discussed, and vanishes in presence of the fact that it is the locality, with its splendid advantages of accessibility, nearness to London, and general resources—not any special spot—which is recommended.

THE LUCKNOW DINNER.

The annual dinner in commemoration of the entry into the Residency of Lucknow of the force under Generals Havelock and Outram, on Sept. 25, 1857, was held at the Hôtel Métropole, last evening. Lord Napier of Magdala, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., occupied the chair, and there were present also General Sir William Olpherts, V.C., K.C.B., Lieutenant-General Dodgson, C.B., Lieutenant-General M'Leod Innes, V.C., Major-General Digby Barker, Major-General Lincoln, C.B., Major-General M'Bean, C.B., Major-General Maitland, C.B., Major-General Oldfield, Major-General G. Stewart, C.B., Surgeon-General J. J. Clarke, M.D., Colonel Chamier, Colonel Montagu Hall, Colonel Moorland, Deputy-Inspector-General Jee, V.C., C.B., Deputy-Inspector Swettenham, Deputy-Surgeon-General Partridge, F.R.C.S., Lieutenant-Colonel Battine, Lieutenant-Colonel Boileau, Lieutenant-Colonel Blake, Lieutenant-Colonel Shrine, Lieutenant-Colonel Wade, Major Beaumont, Captain Keir, Captain Robertson, and Mr. H. D. Willock.

After dinner Lord NAPIER of MAGDALA briefly proposed the healths of the Queen and Empress of India, and of the Prince and Princess of Wales, which were enthusiastically responded to. The noble and gallant chairman then proposed "The Memory of our Departed Comrades," and in so doing remarked upon the great pleasure and gratification which all those present felt in meeting together to commemorate the day, which was one of sacred memory to all who took part in the relief of Lucknow. They might honestly bear in mind that on that day they had done their duty, and had been instrumental in saving the lives of the garrison of Lucknow. The day was sacred in recalling to memory the great leaders who had conducted the relieving force in performing their duty, and had enabled them to accomplish the object for which every one present was prepared to lay down his life. Nothing he could say could add to the fame of the noble commanders Outram and Havelock. History had recorded this. Nor should they forget the gallant soldiers who defended the garrison—Inglis, Wilson, and others too many to enumerate. The deeds of these brave fellows they might still recall for the benefit and example of those who came after. The name of Henry Lawrence, too, by whose means the garrison was provided with the wherewithal to hold out until the relieving force reached them was immortal. They should also bear in mind many who heroically met a soldier's death in the garrison, who were not combatants—among them many women and children. And yet the commemoration should not be mournful, but an occasion of rejoicing, that so many were enabled then to do their duty to their Queen and their country, and also that so many still remained to remember what they bore when, shoulder to shoulder and hand to hand, they advanced to save the beleaguered garrison.

The toast was responded to in solemn silence.

General Sir WILLIAM OLPHERTS, V.C., K.C.B., then proposed "Our living though absent comrades."

General DODGSON proposed "The Original Garrison," and other speakers followed.

BANQUET TO AUSTRALIAN CRICKETERS.

Last evening the Colonial cricketers were entertained by Mr. F. H. Dangar, President of the New South Wales Cricket Club, to a banquet at Bailey's Hotel, Gloucester-road. There was a large gathering, upwards of 200 being present. Mr. Dangar presided, being supported on his right by Mr. M'Donnell, General Fremantle, Admiral Tryon, and Sir S. Wilson, M.P.; whilst on the left were Mr. C. T. B. Turner, Lord Harris, General Battersby, and Sir James Garrett. After the usual toasts had been got through, the Chairman gave the toast of the evening, mentioning that, altogether, he thought that the Australians had not fared so badly, considering that they had started, as it were, under a cloud, and, in addition, had been deprived for the greater portion of the tour of the valuable services of Mr. S. P. Jones.—Mr. M'Donnell, in reply, expressed the thanks of the team for the splendid reception accorded them, and stated his wish to convey to the British public their appreciation of the kindness they had invariably received. Other toasts followed, and the company then separated.

At twenty minutes past nine yesterday morning a large piece of the coping fell from the top of the Monument. Descending with fearful velocity it came into contact with one of the griffins at a corner near the bottom of the Monument; fortunately, no one was hurt. The large window of a coffee-shop was crashed.

MODERN PULPIT ORATORY.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—The original duty of canons of the Church was to hold their houses open for the reception of strangers, and to assist the overworked county clergy by preaching in their churches. This latter duty has recently been recognised by the appointments in more than one diocese of preaching canons.

Theological colleges were started with this idea, amongst others, that our candidates for holy orders might have some training in parochial visitation and the preparation and delivery of sermons. The Presbyterian Church recognises the duty of every man showing a capacity for preaching before he is allowed to undertake that office. The Roman Church confines that office to those only of their priesthood who exhibit due capacity.

In my time, at least at Cambridge (some twenty years ago), no special preparation of any kind was offered for those who contemplated taking holy orders. Very many of our clergy at the present day never wrote a sermon, never studied theology, never had the slightest training either in elocution or the parochial work of a parish before ordination. It appears to me that a special course of study should be offered at the Universities in their third year for those who have decided on the Church as their future profession, and that the M.A. degree should be granted to the clergy only after a special examination in theology. This would encourage the young clergy to pursue a regular course of divinity reading. Unfortunately, in large parishes the serving of tables and the purely secular duties of a clergyman's life occupy too large a portion of his time. Many of these duties could be better carried out by laymen. When one considers the multitudinous number of secular duties connected with the organisation of a parish, by which the time of the clergyman is so taken up, when no foundation of theological knowledge has been laid, we need not feel surprised that the average clergyman lays more and more stress on ornate services, depreciates the art of preaching, relies more and more on manuals of church teaching, and finds himself more and more inclined to rely on those popular guide-books for the help of the ignorant or indolent preachers in which the church's year is cut up into a series of fasts, festivals, and saints' days, to which subjects these books mainly devote their skeleton discourses. Of all our professions the representatives of the clerical are the worst educated for the particular duties of their calling. This is not so much the fault of the clergy themselves as the deficiency of a special curriculum; the frittering away of much of their time in work which might be much better employed in preparation and reflection for the purpose of teaching. Education is a bringing out, and the reason why sermons are so unprofitable too often is that nothing has been "put in," hence naturally "Ex nihilo nihil fit."

With regard to Nonconformist preachers. In the country, at least, the deacons very often circumscribe the hints and even dictate the subjects of the preacher's discourse. We have just had a young Nonconformist minister of the new school of culture in this parish resign his charge rather than preach on texts kindly supplied by the ruling deacon!

There is some advantage that we of the Establishment enjoy from the security of our incomes, since we can, without fear or favour, preach that which we are called on to deliver. It cannot be said that we thereby display much originality, which the use of manuals and promptuaries for preachers in a great measure explains. With regard to extempore preaching, there is much to be said on either side. The majority of Nonconformist preachers learn their sermons from manuscripts, or boldly use them. The Rev. H. Haweis tells us he began extempore preaching because he was so nervous that he could not read his written sermons. The late Frederick Robertson preached extemporary sermons; and, had it not been for one of his congregation taking down his sermons, we should have lost the best pulpit utterances of the age. The present Bishop of Ripon, like Mr. Spurgeon, preaches from notes, which are generally composed on one side of a sheet of note-paper. At all events, beginners and those who preach controversial sermons would do well to stick to manuscript.

H. NORTON PALMER (M.A. Cantab.)

Langham, Essex, Sept. 24.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—I have read with much interest the letters from Dr. Parker in connection with "Modern Pulpit Oratory," as also the communications from your several correspondents, and think that your allowing the subject to be ventilated in your columns will certainly be productive of much good. With the remarks made by "Kept Away" I have much sympathy, for there are doubtless tens of thousands of earnest, thoughtful men and women of all classes who refrain from public worship in our so-called "sanctuaries" for the reason that their keen common sense prevents them from listening to mere "pulpit machines," of which there are, unfortunately, only too many. After all, the church or chapel should be truly the house of God, where all can unite in solemn and sincere prayer and praise, as it was gloriously so in the Jewish temple of old, and not a place for mere ear tickling or intellectual gratification. Although a Nonconformist, I much appreciate and half envy the advantages our friends of the Establishment have in this respect. I may ask if the well meaning, but certainly mistaken, people who have the lead in these matters imagine that the "earnest young men" fresh from theological college forcing, where, in many instances, their individuality is destroyed, are fitted by the artificial instruction there received to minister in "Divine things," apart from any supernatural help that may be given. No, Sir, these colleges have rung the death knell of what was once sterling and honest, if at times coarse and unbending, dissent. We have now smart chapels, possessing in instances towers and spires (without bells), stained glass, trained choirs, polish, culture, and amusement, but the old-fashioned Godly sincerity and piety is all but gone. I write as a sufferer, having, in the course of more than twenty years as Bible class leader, deacon, and precentor, only too sadly experienced the conceit and shallow presumption of many of the young preachers ground out of these theological mills, some of them being really Agnostics at heart. They know little or nothing of the big world in which they live, and are strangers to its innumerable phases of thought, while what is still worse they do not understand nor truly sympathise with the difficulties, temptations, and sorrows of humanity. Mere sounding brass and tinkling cymbals indeed they are. The result apart from other influences, is that, with the exception of weak and emotional men and women and excitable sensation-loving "young people," their ministrations are at the most only indulgently listened to. The bulwark of old dissent was as a rule the recognition of the sterling truths hidden under what was called "Calvinistic" or "High Doctrine." This is as a rule abhorred in the present day; but depend upon it, if the beautiful but forcible way in which this is put in Article 17 of the Church of England were more appreciated, understood, and taught by the clerical profession, we should witness far less insincerity, hollowness, and extravagance. As justly hinted at by you in your original comments upon Dr. Parker's letter, the theory of the Christian religion is, after all, but simple, and a vast amount of learned exposition only tends to weary, puzzle, and irritate.

Far more power is wielded, and good done, by a right-living exponent of any truth in which he believes than by all the mere pulpit thunderers or elocutionists in the world. With many others, I highly value a really good sermon that has been carefully and prayerfully prepared; but what I emphatically do object to is the delivery of a tricky, sensational appeal, unaccompanied by that true solemnity which should ever be uppermost in the mind of a man professedly set apart by the Almighty to win or guide the souls of men.—I remain, Sir, yours faithfully,

THOMAS W. FLETCHER.

A NEEDED CHURCH REFORM.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—There are two sides to nearly every question. In the diocese to which Mr. David Bowen belongs the episcopal visitation fee amounts to but 6s, and that once in three years—no very oppressive tax. As to the suggestion that the bishop should pay these because the bishop appoints the officers, this is much as if I were called on to pay my parish clerk or sexton. The officers and their work are not for the bishop's use and benefit but for that of us all.

I am sorry to see what looks like (though I am sure it is not meant as) an attack on our good bishop. Whatever may be the case elsewhere—and perhaps may have formerly been the rule in this diocese—I do think the burdens on the clergy of St. David's are now, so far as the bishop can effect it, as light as possible. On the other hand, the bishop's liberal aid is extended to every good work; and to connect his name with extortion is simply slander.—I am, Sir, yours obediently,

LACY H. RUMSEY.

THE NEW ARMY RIFLE.

Yesterday the president of the Small Arms Committee, Major-General Philip Smith, C.B., issued his report upon the experiments made at Aldershot on the 21st inst., with the new rifle at long ranges. He states that "the target represented a battalion of seven companies, each of twenty-four files, standing in quarter-column. The first company was represented by iron and wood screens; the remaining companies by wooden screens of thickness varying from a quarter to three-quarters of an inch. At 2,000 yards 43 per cent. of hits was obtained; at 2,400 yards, 25·90 per cent.; and at 2,800 yards, 14·90 per cent. A heavy mist caused the target to be absolutely invisible at all the ranges; therefore the fire had to be directed by using an intermediate object to aim at. It may be described as 'indirect fire,' and consequently most instructive to the troops engaged and those witnessing the practice. The detachments were taken from the 1st Devonshire, 2nd Suffolk, 1st Royal Sussex, and 1st King's Rifles, and were composed of men classified as follows: Twenty-five marksmen, seven first-class shots, two second-class, one third-class, and two trained recruits. At 2,800 yards the bullets penetrated the wooden screens and were flattened against the iron screens."

The Lord Chancellor has appointed the Rev. W. G. Royle, of Spilsby, to the rectory of Winceby, Lincolnshire.

A SAFE FOUR PER CENT.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—I have read with considerable interest the letter of a "Ratepayer" under the above heading, and feel thankful that the subject of the housing of our London poor has been brought forward in so powerful a way in your columns. I can only hope the matter will not be allowed to rest here, but that some action will follow, for, indeed, some of us are weary of delay. Five years since I sent a memorial to the District Board of Works touching the "Pearl-street area" referred to by your correspondent, and which forms part of this parish, by way of following up a previous effort to get rid of so foul a spot. But in spite of these attempts and of repeated condemnation on the part of the authorities it exists to-day in all its terrible reality and abounding sin. A large number of so-called "Furnished Rooms" are here let out at 10d a day, introducing into our midst a terrible class, to the annoyance of many who, though poor, desire to be respectable. The sanitary arrangements of the place could not well be worse, no wonder, therefore, that the infant mortality is so great. Some years since a late medical officer of health in the Whitechapel district directed the attention of the Board of Works to the death-rate of this particular area. I quote the following from his report. "In the area known as the Great Pearl-street property, comprising 8,650 square yards, the courts and alleys are of a very unhealthy nature, and here the death-rate per annum is 33 3-10ths per 1,000, while for the whole district the death-rate was only 26 4-10ths per 1,000. The latter rate is serious enough, as will be perceived from the fact that there are parishes in London where the death-rate is only 16 or 17 per 1,000." A medical officer of the Whitechapel Union wrote, as far back as July, 1877: "I think I can assert most positively that diseases of a low type, and especially scrofula and mesenteric disease among children, prevail, and always have prevailed, to a larger extent than in any other part of my medical district in Great and Little Pearl-street."

As a plague spot, therefore, apart from any other consideration, this area should be dealt with. But I venture to hope, for the sake of those who cannot help themselves in the matter, some better house accommodation will here soon be found. That it would be remunerative there can be no question. The poor need to live near their work, and for this end they put up with much inconvenience, but they would gladly exchange their present abodes for more comfortable quarters, especially if these could be had at a less exorbitant rent than that they have now to pay. As public attention has again been called to the state of things in this parish, I cannot but express the hope that something may soon be done to help our present distressed condition.—Yours, &c.,

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—The lurid light which recent events have cast on the inner life of the great London "residuum" should not be allowed to die down without some good coming, if possible, out of the filthy exposures. We are, probably, all agreed that the very first step necessary to be taken, if we would try to raise some of our humbler fellow-creatures to the level of humanity, is to render it possible for them to live above the level of the brutes. It will be generally admitted, too, that one of the earliest requirements of civilisation, in its most unfledged condition, is a certain decree of privacy in sleeping arrangements. Without this the most elementary decency is out of the question.

For its own sake, to put the matter on no higher ground, Society is bound to do its best to place this modicum of respectability within the reach of all, since the degradation bred of hopeless bestiality is a perpetual peril to the State, both physically, socially, and politically. From this point of view, then, since it is of pressing importance to bring as many waifs and strays as possible within the reach of humanising influences, it seems desirable not to aim at too great things at first, but to be content with endeavouring to provide, at a practicable rent, and for all comers (no questions being asked as to how the money is earned which pays for the nightly "doss"), sleeping accommodation such as they have been used to in the common lodging-houses, but differing from it toto cœlo in the fact of each sleeper having a separate compartment, closed by a door locking inside, but openable by a master-key, like the separate chambers at public baths. Very little more space would be required for this arrangement, since the compartments would be open at the top, the partitions (of double match-boarding) being about 8ft or 9ft high. If desired, the spaces might be roofed over with galvanised wire-netting, to prevent intercommunication. Such an "aviary" would not be very costly to construct, and its superior comfort, as compared with the common dormitory of the lodging-house, might be trusted to attract customers. Moreover, were a "model lodging" started on these lines and proved workable public opinion would not long tolerate the continuance of the present unsatisfactory system, and the existing places would have to be remodelled, with the best results to public decency.—I am, Sir, yours, &c.,

THE WATERLOO BALL.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—A letter from Sir W. Fraser appeared in your paper on the 5th inst. on the subject of the historical ball given by the Duchess of Richmond, at Brussels on the eve of Quatre Bras.

That letter refers to communications between Sir W. Fraser and Lady de Ros—who, as Lady Georgiana Lennox, was present at the ball—and, as it is of a nature to convey an erroneous impression of that lady's recollections and of facts within her knowledge, some corrections are necessary.

My excuse for troubling you with these remarks is that recent conversations with Lady de Ros have placed me in possession of particulars which may interest some of your readers.

Lady de Ros, in a letter to Sir W. Fraser, written on the day on which his first account of the supposed discovery was made public, stated three important respects in which her recollections (fully corroborated by those of her sister, Lady Louisa Tighe) could not be reconciled with Sir William's theory:

1. That the ball-room was not at the rear, but at the side, of the Duke of Richmond's house.

2. That instead of being 120ft long it was not much more than half that length.

3. That it was on the ground floor, and not upon the first floor, as stated by Sir W. Fraser.

To the first of these objections Sir W. Fraser replied that "supposing the house faced towards the boulevard, the room was at the rear, but that as he has no doubt that the principal front of the Duke's house was towards the Rue des Cendres, this would place the room in its right position" (i.e., I presume, at the side).

Upon this I have to observe that, from a plan of the premises shown me by Lady de Ros, it distinctly appears that there were two entrance doors to the Duke's house—one in the Rue de la Blanchisserie, to the left of which, on entering, was the ball-room on the ground floor, with three windows looking on the same street (Rue de la Blanchisserie), the other door directly facing it at the other end of a long hall opening into the garden and looking towards the boulevard. This latter door may have been the principal entrance, as it is approached by a carriage-drive from a lodge in the Rue de la Blanchisserie, which passes under the extreme end of the ball-room, and, by a circular sweep, reaches the door in question. But, whether this was so or not, it is, at all events, clear that it can in no way affect the position of the ball-room, which was at the side of the house, as a kind of wing, and not at the rear.

The site of the house, as being in the Rue de la Blanchisserie and not in the Rue des Cendres, as stated by Sir W. Fraser, is further proved by the fact that Lady de Ros has letters in her possession addressed to her "Rue de la Blanchisserie," and it may be added that the Duke of Wellington himself was in the habit of speaking of the house jocularly as the "Wash-house."

With respect to the length of the room, Sir W. Fraser thinks that a young lady may well have mistaken the size of the room in which she danced. This is no doubt true; but those who have the pleasure of knowing Lady de Ros will agree with me that she is no ordinary person, and that her accuracy of observation and of memory would put to shame that of most people of half her age. But I may add that the plan of the premises appears fully to bear out her recollections; for, if the room had been 120ft long, the only three windows on each side of it must have been of portentous width, and its proportion to the other rooms in the house renders this most improbable.

On the third point, Sir W. Fraser remarks that the Rue de la Blanchisserie is on a lower level than the Rue des Cendres, and that the ball-room may thus have been on the first floor when approached from the Rue de la Blanchisserie, and on the ground floor when approached from the Rue des Cendres. This explanation is conclusively disposed of by the fact, clearly proved by the plan, that the ball-room was approached from the Rue de la Blanchisserie, and not from the Rue des Cendres; and that, whether the principal entrance to the Duke's house was by the door on the Rue de la Blanchisserie or by that on the garden front, facing the boulevard, it must have been on the ground floor, and not on the first floor.

So far, therefore, from Lady de Ros's recollections confirming Sir W. Fraser's conclusions, as he states in his letter, they appear to show that those conclusions are altogether illusory.—I have the honour to be, Sir, your obedient servant,

LOUIS MALLET.

Englefield-green, Sept. 24.

THE GATESHEAD MURDER.

A correspondent telegraphed last night: "A man answering in almost every particular the description of the person the police want in connection with the Gateshead murder was seen at Byer's-green Colliery about seven o'clock on Sunday morning by Mr. Robert Lodge, foreman coke-burner. The man was in a cabin near the coke-ovens, and when first observed was in a sitting posture, either whetting or cleaning a large knife on the leather of his boot. The stranger inquired the time and disappeared suddenly. Mr. Lodge speaks positively as to the description of the man. The distance from the scene of the murder to Byer's-green is about fourteen miles. Many persons cling to the belief that the crime has a connection with the Whitechapel butcheries. The murderer of Jane Savage does not appear, however, to have done his terrible work in so skilful a manner as the Whitechapel criminal, but rather to have hacked at the body with mere brute force. Nevertheless, there is the similarity that the bodies in both cases were frightfully mutilated. Some of the pit shafts in the neighbourhood of Birtley are of great depth, and can only be explored with difficulty."

MR. DILLON ON THE GOVERNMENT POLICY.

The fortnightly meeting of the National League was held yesterday at the offices in Upper Sackville-street, Dublin. There was a larger gathering than usual. On the motion of Mr. T. Harrington, M.P., the chair was taken amidst loud applause by Mr. John Dillon, M.P. There were also present Dr. Kenny, M.P., Mr. T. M. Healy, M.P., Mr. T. D. Sullivan, M.P., and Mr. David Sheehy, M.P. Mr. Harrington announced that the receipts since last meeting amounted to £291 14s 6d (of which £165 19s. came from Australia), and that £165 had been voted in grants to evicted tenants.

Mr. DILLON then addressed the meeting. He met with a cordial reception, and spoke with his accustomed fire and energy. He said that since last he had the pleasure of presiding over these meetings he had had three months of undisturbed and peaceful reflection, and that reflection had brought to his mind no repentance for any of his past deeds. (Cheers.) He came before them that day a hardened sinner, and if it were a crime to sympathise with the tortured and down-trodden of his own country—if it were a crime to desire with an intense longing to see the people of Ireland lifted up to the full situation and privilege of freemen in their own country—if it were a crime to have used his best endeavours to devise a policy whereby they might be permitted to defend their homes and resist their oppressors until such time as they would be enabled to live peaceably and to make their own laws in their own country—if it were a crime to strive with all his strength (and not, he hoped, unsuccessfully) to withdraw his people from the dark ways of secret combination, of murder, and of outrage, and to lead them into paths of nobler combination and open action—if all these things were sins and crimes, then all that he could say was, repeating the words of the greatest of all poets, "For this sin there is no remedy; it is so framed within my heart." (Cheers.) At the outset he could not refrain from referring to some incidents and matters connected with his late imprisonment. The kindness he had received from many friends had left an indelible impression upon his memory, particularly the action of the crowd in court when he was consigned to prison. He should thank the priests of patriotic Mayor, and of the arch-diocese of Armagh, who, under circumstances of no ordinary difficulty, came together at great meetings and expressed in the face of the country and of the world their approval of his action and sympathy with him in the imprisonment he had to endure; and he must likewise express his deep sense of gratitude towards the multitudes of English, Scotch, and Welsh friends who had lately overwhelmed him with expressions of kindness. He could not abstain from saying also that he did not, and could not, share in the expressions of impatience which had fallen from the lips of some of his friends with reference to the action of the English people. (Hear, hear.) That impatience was not to be wondered at; it was most natural, for it was difficult for them in Ireland to endure with self-control and with patience the treatment to which their people were subjected, when the crowbar and the battering ram were in full swing amongst the homes of their people, creating a terrific hemorrhage which was drawing the very heart blood of the Irish race away month by month and year by year. (Hear, hear.) But it was impossible for him to be blind to the facts that were forced upon his notice as regarded the mighty change which came over the minds of the masses of the people of England. Remembering that, he thought it was not wise to be impatient because the liberty of Ireland was not accomplished in a day. He saw no cause for impatience, but rather for hope, and even exultation. Coming now, as he did, from what was mentally a degradation and an insult to him, he hoped, as an honourable man, he could find in his heart not the slightest trace of bitterness about the people of England. (Hear, hear.) He recollected the day when the power, and even the name, of Englishmen was hateful to his heart; but that feeling was fast passing away. (Cheers.) In his imprisonment he had the good fortune to fall into the hands of men who were gentlemen, and into the hands of prison officials who had to discharge their duty with humanity and honour—(cheers)—and he would always carry with him the kindliest recollections of the governor and the doctor in Dundalk Gaol, who had shown that they were not animated by the spirit that reigned in Dublin Castle and in certain other quarters. He gave Mr. Balfour every credit for having had plenty of pluck, and in having stuck to his promise to treat him, and others of the Irish Parliamentary party, as he did the meanest prisoners. Their actions might be legal or illegal, but no man believed in his heart that they were actuated by sordid or criminal notions, and it had come to be regarded by all civilised nations that a broad line was to be drawn between men who were actuated by high and noble principles—whether true or false in their conception—and the common criminals who were actuated by base and dishonourable intentions. (Hear.) He could not help pointing out what a curious commentary it was on the system of government under which they lived in Ireland that while he was a prisoner in Dundalk Gaol, dressed in the ordinary felon's dress—for he did wear it—and treated like the commonest pickpocket and the lowest of humanity, he first had the honour and the pleasure of making the acquaintance of the Primate of the Irish Church, who considered it his duty to call upon him and make a respectful visit. (Cheers.) He had noticed since he came out of prison that the Government were bragging and boasting that they were succeeding in their policy. If the object of Mr. Balfour was to levy the back rents of some of the worst landlords in Ireland, he (Mr. Dillon) could understand his policy, although he could not discover many signs of its success. (Hear.) If the object was to inflict suffering and contumely on the Irish race, he could also understand his policy, and no doubt he had succeeded; but he had a great force at his back, and, of course, with a sufficient army, it was always possible to keep down an unarmed people; but if the object of Mr. Balfour was to build up a stable and secure government, no more signal failure was ever recorded, because, unstable and insecure as was the Castle system of government in Ireland when he came into power, it was ten times more discredited to-day, and the longer he (Mr. Balfour) reigned in Ireland the more unsound would it become. (Cheers.) Some friends had assumed that he (Mr. Dillon) admitted at his trial that he had broken the law. He never admitted anything of the sort; quite the contrary—(laughter and cheers)—and he wished to take the first opportunity of protesting against the misstatement. (Hear.) He maintained, and did all along maintain, that he was found guilty most illegally and scandalously. The magistrates at Niel and Judge Kisbey at Dundalk exhibited the greatest partisanship. They could not restrain, though they made some effort to do so, the indecent manifestation of gratified spite and jubilation with which they inflicted upon him the utmost sentence which the law permitted them to give. (Groans.) As to the present situation in Ireland, he had not had much opportunity of collecting information, but he had endeavoured, since his release, to inform himself of what had taken place during the last three months, and to arrive at some conclusions as to the advice which he would feel obliged to give to the Irish people in their attitude during the coming winter. First of all, he must notice that the policy known as the Plan of Campaign, with which he had been much identified, had met with much criticism. Some friends of his considered the campaigners were too moderate, and that, in point of fact, throughout the whole of this movement they had been propping-up Irish landlordism and giving it a new lease of life. On the other hand, the Irish landlords and their friends seemed to consider the campaigners differed very little from public robbers and plunderers, and that they were the very worst enemies of their class that ever appeared in Irish history. ("Hear," and laughter.) Others thought that they had degraded politics, and could see no hope for the future, except in a return to the principles of Thomas Davis. (Cheers.) He (Mr. Dillon) flattered himself that he knew something of the principles of Thomas Davis. (Cheers.) He knew something, too, of the principles of John Mitchell, and believed in his inmost heart that if any of these great and gallant Irishmen, whose names were graven bright on the honour roll of Ireland, were with them that day they would join heart and soul in the Plan of Campaign. (Cheers.) Some men thought that they campaigners were sinners, and that their action had been sinful, but amid all this storm of criticism he could find no man who had come forward and told the people of Ireland what they were to do if they did not heed their advice. (Hear, hear.) The winter was approaching, and he challenged from that room every one of their critics to come forward like men and tell the people of Ireland what they were to do. If any man produced a better or more practicable policy than the Plan of Campaign, he would not hesitate for one moment to advise the people of Ireland to adopt it and give its author his utmost support. But meanwhile he could not bring himself to advise the Irish tenantry to fall back upon the Ribbon Lodge, nor could he reconcile himself to a condition of things which would leave Captain Moonlight the possessor of the field as the only arbiter or avenger of their wrongs. (Hear, hear.) He could not on the other hand tell them to have confidence in the British House of Commons, which had never shown justice or mercy up to this; nor could he tell them to rely on the Irish land courts, which were now placed under the control of men pledged to landlords' interests, and whose headquarters were the Kildare-street Club. Speaking on almost the anniversary of the rejection of Mr. Parnell's bill in 1886, he claimed that but for the Plan of Campaign the reduction of judicial rents, then scouted at, would never have been carried, and to the credit of the Plan he placed the saving thus effected, which on the three years would represent £750,000. As an alternative to the Plan of Campaign, a conference was suggested. Sensible men meeting round a table might find a settlement this winter, but he preferred holding his arms till the conference was over. (Hear.) The worst enemies of Ireland were those who came by way of the peacemaker, crying "Peace, peace," when there was no peace, and encouraging the people to hold out the white flag when they ought to show nothing but the boldest front, as men remembering the true adage, which was the offspring of long centuries of experience, "Those who wish for peace must prepare for war." (Cheers.)

Mr. T. M. Healy, M.P., and other speakers followed.

The Land Sub-Commissioners sat at Armagh again yesterday, when Mr. Green, the chief of the commissioners, gave the following decisions in cases heard from the estate of the Earl of Charlemont: Clarke, old rent £21 13s, new rent £16 12s; Gose, £29, reduced to £21 10s; Hanna, £10 15s, reduced to £8 15s; Gray, £17 7s, reduced to £13 10s; Tweedy, £21, reduced to £17 10s; Lockhart, £14 10s, reduced to £11 10s; Dougan, £12, reduced to £10; Hanna, £15, reduced to £13 10s; Brooks, £12 10s, reduced to £8 10s; Nicholls, £14, reduced to £12 10s; Nicholls, £20 17s, reduced to £15 10s; Pillow, £20 9s, reduced to £16 10s; Sarah Nicholl, £14 17s 6d, reduced to £12. There were other decisions given, and similar reductions in cases from the estate of a Miss Molyneux, a large landowner in co. Armagh, were made.

A correspondent at Carrick-on-Suir states that fourteen families residing on Mr. Eyres' Figlash property are under notice for summary eviction within the next few days. Hundreds of farmers and labourers assembled yesterday, and within a few hours removed the crops, stock, and household furniture. The several holdings will be put up for sale at the sheriff's office, Clonmel, on Friday next.

Mr. Michael Davitt delivered a lecture on the Irish question at Radcliff last night, in which he said he believed that if the real facts surrounding evictions in Ireland were known to the people of Great Britain as well as they were known to himself, and if the popular leaders appealed to the public sentiment against them, they would before long be stopped. He dealt at length with Mr. Chamberlain's recent speech at Bradford, remarking that it was conceived in prejudice and antipathy to Ireland.

Miss A. J. Meredith, writing from Holy Trinity Vicarage, Shoreditch, appeals for help in arranging a bazaar in aid of the building fund of Holy Trinity Church, Shoreditch, the foundation-stone of which has been recently laid. It is proposed to divide the proceeds between the building fund and the scheme for providing 400 or 500 poor children with free dinners during the coming winter.

CENTRAL CRIMINAL COURT—SEPT. 25.

(Before Mr. Justice CHARLES.)

THE CHARGE AGAINST A MEDICAL MAN.—The trial was resumed of James Gloster, a duly qualified medical practitioner, residing at Upper Phillimore-place, Kensington, on a charge of having caused the death of a married woman named Eliza Jane Schumacher, who lived apart from her husband, in Moreton-place, Pimlico, and worked as a dressmaker.—Mr. Poland and Mr. Mead prosecuted on behalf of the Treasury; and the accused was defended by Mr. Gill and Mr. Horace Avory.—The previous day's evidence showed that the deceased, erroneously believing she was enceinte, had an unlawful operation performed on June 18 last, and died from the effects of it on the 27th of the same month. So clumsily had the operation been performed that the prosecution admitted it was difficult to imagine that it could have been done by a medical man with the skill Dr. Gloster undoubtedly possessed. The doctor himself emphatically denied the charge. Mrs. Schumacher had called at his house more than once, and asked him to give her something to get her out of her trouble, but he indignantly declined, and ordered her not to return. He had attended her during some illness several years ago. On June 17, the day before that on which the prosecution alleged the act was performed, he received a telegram from Moreton-place, asking him to call, and he did so, but did not treat Mrs. Schumacher. The main evidence on which the prosecution relied was a statement made by the deceased on the day on which she died, written down by Dr. Crane in the presence of Dr. Frankish and the deceased's sister, and signed by the deceased's own hand. There arose the question whether this statement could be admitted as evidence, that is to say, whether, when the woman made it, she was in "the settled and hopeless expectation of death." During her illness she had given her sister instructions about the disposal of her property in case she did not get better, and it was stated that she had also expressed on several occasions her belief that she would not get well again.—Mr. Poland submitted that under these circumstances the statement was admissible as evidence.—Mr. Gill objected, maintaining that the admission of such a statement was against the rules of evidence, which in a case like this ought, in the words of Mr. Justice Byles, to be applied not only scrupulously, but with almost superstitious care. When Mrs. Schumacher made it she was not in articulo mortis, neither was she warned that what she was going to say would be used as evidence. There were cases where women had made false charges against doctors, and, under all the circumstances, he submitted that the statement could not be admitted.—Mr. Justice Charles, in giving his decision, said: The law casts upon me the very heavy responsibility of saying whether the dying declaration, as it is called, of this deceased person is or is not admissible in evidence. The result of the decisions as to the admissibility of dying depositions comes to this: there must be an unqualified belief in the nearness of death—there must be a belief without hope that the declarant is about to die. In one case it was laid down that "all hope of this world must be gone"; and in another Mr. Justice Willes held that it must be proved that the declarant was dying, and that there must be a "settled and hopeless expectation of death." In the last case of all Mr. Justice Lush went even further, holding that there must be expectation of "immediate" death, adding, "if the declarant thinks he will die to-morrow, it will not do." With great deference to the learned judge whom I have just referred to, I would rather prefer to adopt the language of Mr. Justice Willes, and say that the declarant must be under the "settled and hopeless expectation of death"—immediate death in this sense that death is impending, not on the instant, but within a very short distance indeed. These are the principles which must guide me in the exercise of my judgment in this case. The admission of dying declarations at all is a great anomaly, and they ought only to be admitted, to use the language of Mr. Justice Byles, "with scrupulous and almost superstitious care." And for this reason. The accused is not present when it is made, there is no opportunity for cross-examination, and it is not made under the sanction of an oath. In the present case can I come to the conclusion that when this statement was made the woman was under a "settled and hopeless expectation of death?" After looking at all the facts carefully I find I cannot come to any such conclusion. She thought she might not recover, but she did not give herself entirely up for good, and unless I could come to the conclusion—which I cannot—that she did so give herself entirely up, her statement is not admissible. The conversations she had with her sister were simply those of a woman in dreadful illness, and her injunctions as to the disposal of her effects were such as would be given in case death should take place. I therefore hold that this statement cannot be admitted as evidence.—Mr. Poland then stated that after the ruling of his lordship it would be hopeless on the part of the prosecution to go on with any prospect of success, and he would therefore not proceed further with the case.—Mr. Gill said that Dr. Gloster was most anxious that the accusation should be investigated to the very foundation, in order that he might show his innocence of the charge brought against him, and he had a mass of evidence to prove that Dr. Gloster was not in Moreton-place at all on June 18, the day on which the prosecution alleged that the operation was performed.—The jury then returned a verdict of acquittal, and Dr. Gloster was discharged.

MIDDLESEX SESSIONS, SEPT. 25.

(Before the ASSISTANT-JUDGE.)

SHOPLIFTING.—Charles Paul, 23, described in the calendar as a blacksmith, was indicted for stealing fifteen watches, of the value together of nearly £300, from a jeweller's shop in Baker-street, Marylebone, the proprietor of which is Mr. Bening Arnold.—He was convicted, and, previous convictions having been proved, he was sentenced to five years' penal servitude.—Upon hearing the sentence the mother of the prisoner screamed and created a commotion. She had to be led out of court by the officials.

POLICE INTELLIGENCE.

THAMES.—THE KNIFE IN WHITECHAPEL.—Charles Ludwig, 40, a decently-attired German, who professed not to understand English, and gave an address in the Minories, was brought up on remand, charged with being drunk and threatening to stab Alexander Finlay, of 51, Leman-street, Whitechapel.—The evidence of prosecutor showed that at three o'clock on the morning of Tuesday week he was standing at a coffee-stall in the Whitechapel-road, when Ludwig came up in a state of intoxication. The person in charge of the stall refused to serve him. Ludwig turned upon witness, and, pulling out a long-bladed knife, threatened to stab him with it. A constable came up, and the man was then given into custody.—Constable 221H deposed that he arrested the accused. On the way to the station prisoner dropped a long-bladed knife, which was open, and when he was searched a razor and a long-bladed pair of scissors were found on him.—Constable John Johnson, 866 of the City Police, deposed that early on the morning of Tuesday week he was on duty in the Minories, when he heard loud screams of "Murder" proceeding from a dark court. The court in question leads to some railway arches, and is well known as a dangerous locality. Witness went down the court and found the prisoner with a woman. The accused appeared to be under the influence of drink. Witness asked what he was doing there, and he replied "Nothing." The female, who appeared to be very agitated and frightened, said, "Oh, policeman, do take me out of this." She was so frightened that she could give no further explanation. Witness got her and the accused out of the court, and, having sent the latter off, walked with the woman to the end of his beat, when she said, "Dear me! he frightened me very much when he pulled a big knife out." Witness asked her, "Why didn't you tell me that at the time?" and she replied, "I was too much frightened." He then went to look for the prisoner, but could not find him, and therefore warned several other constables. On the last occasion witness was unable to procure the attendance of the woman.—On the application of Detective-Inspector Abberline, of Scotland-yard, Mr. Saunders again remanded the accused for full inquiries to be made. He also allowed Inspector Abberline to interview Ludwig with the interpreter, Mr. Smaje, to ascertain if he would give any information as to where he was on certain dates.—The woman Ludwig was alleged to have attempted to stab has been found. She is well known to the police.—Adam Sherriff, 39, was charged with being drunk and threatening to stab Margaret Welsh.—Prosecutrix was unable to attend owing to the state of her health.—Jane Charles, twelve years of age, living at 82, Lambeth-street, Whitechapel, said that on Monday afternoon prisoner, who lived in the same house, came home and had a row with his wife. Afterwards, in a public-house, he went to hit his wife with a glass and a pot. Mrs. Welsh was there, and the accused, who was drunk, drew a knife to her. He called her names and said, "I'll cut you with this knife."—Constable 355 H deposed that when he arrested Sherriff he said, "If I get six months I'll rip her up when I come out." He made an attempt to get at her when witness had hold of him.—Mr. Saunders remanded the accused.

HAMMERSMITH.—ALLEGED ILLEGAL DISTRESS.—Albert Addison, of Richmond-gardens, West Kensington Park, was summoned by Lucy Nichols, a clerk, for illegally distraining upon her goods. There was also a summons against William Scory, the broker.—Mr. Rose appeared for the complainant, and stated that the defendant Addison was her landlord, holding under the Hon. E. J. Strutt, who gave her notice to pay the rent to his agent.—The complainant deposed that for fourteen months she had occupied a top back room at Addison's house at 2s a week. Early in the present month she received a notice from Mr. Strutt not to pay rent to the landlord, but to him. She paid her rent to the agent for two weeks. She was told that Addison had not any property to distrain upon. On the 21st inst. the distress was put in during her absence. She read the letter from Mr. Strutt to the defendant, who made no demand for the rent. On the 21st, when she returned home she found her bed gone. She called to the defendant, but he refused to appear. The distress was put in for 4s. Her bed, blankets, and pillows, worth £8, were taken away. She was told that a distress would be levied upon her goods if she did not pay the rent to Mr. Strutt.—The defendant put in the agreement between him and Mr. Strutt. He said he owed rent, but he was paying it on account.—Mr. Paget observed that the payment of rent to Mr. Strutt was a good discharge to the complainant. In the case against the broker, the complainant's sister, Kate Nichols, was called. She said she was lying on the bed when the defendant forced the door open. She was pulled off the bed. On asking for an explanation, she was told by the defendant, "That is enough for you; I know your character." He collected the blankets together and took them out of the room. She asked him to wait until her sister returned. He said he could not wait in the room with her.—Cross-examined: A fair man pulled her off the bed. The defendant did not show any authority. He wrote something after the goods were taken away.—The defendant called witnesses, and it was stated that the door was not forced open, and that the complainant's sister refused to pay the rent when it was demanded. It was alleged that she was sitting in an easy chair; but the complainant said there was not an easy chair in the room.—Mr. Paget, in giving his decision, said there was clearly an illegal distress, and an order would be made for the restoration of the goods. He inquired where the articles were deposited.—The defendant replied at Woodfield-crescent, Harrow.—Mr. Paget then adjourned the summonses for the goods to be restored.

SUPPOSED FRACAS ON THE RAILWAY.—In the case of Henry Burquest, a seaman, who was reported to be committed for trial on Monday, by Mr. De Rutzen, on a charge of stabbing Joseph Cowen with a knife, while riding in a train between Euston and Willesden, it appears that after the commitment and just before the magistrate left the bench the prisoner was brought from the cells and again placed in the dock. His statement, which had been omitted, was then taken, and after it was read over Mr. De Rutzen said he did not think a jury would convict on the uncorroborated evidence of a drunken man, and ordered him to be discharged.

At Leighton Buzzard police-court yesterday Baron de Ville, a French gentleman, of Stockgrove Park, Beds, appeared to an adjourned summons charging him with committing a violent assault on a boy, aged ten, named Isaac Arnold, at Heath-end Reach, on Aug. 18.—Mr. H. H. Wells, of London, appeared for the prosecution; and Mr. Ewen, of Luton, for the defence.—The lad, with other children, had been playing among bracken on land belonging to the defendant, who came up armed with a gun, and accompanied by a man and three dogs. Some of the children ran away, but Arnold laid down and hid himself in the furze. Thereupon defendant, as alleged, took him up by the collar, kicked him on the back, and knocked him down twice. Meanwhile, the man accompanying him had caught a little girl named Louisa Stone, and the Baron, it was stated, braced them together by the wrist with the thong of a dog whip. On being remonstrated with by the parents of the children the defendant fired his gun in the air, swore at them, called them rogues and thieves, and threatened to blow out Mrs. Arnold's brains. The boy was taken home, where it was found that his back was seriously injured, and prolonged hysteria followed, and this was declared to be due to fright, and might permanently affect the nervous system.—For the defence the alleged kicking was utterly denied, and it was suggested that the injury to the boy, who had now recovered, was caused by a fall before the defendant overtook him.—Evidence was called with the view to show the case had been highly coloured.—The Bench acquitted defendant of the charge of kicking the boy, but convicted him of unjustifiable assault by tying the children together, and imposed a fine of £1 and 17s 6d costs.

ASSOCIATION OF CHAMBERS OF COMMERCE.

Yesterday morning the autumnal meeting of the Association of Chambers of Commerce was commenced at Cardiff, and was attended by about 200 representatives from some fifty chambers of commerce in various parts of the kingdom. In the morning the delegates were received at the Town Hall by the Mayor of Cardiff, Alderman Jacobs, to whom they were introduced by the Marquis of Bute. Amongst those present were Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, M.P., Sir John Gorst, M.P., and Mr. J. M. Maclean, M.P.

At the conclusion of the reception the delegates proceeded to the Park Hall, and Colonel HILL, M.P., the president, delivered an address. He said it was fifteen years since the association met in Cardiff. To show how the material prosperity of Cardiff had increased he quoted figures as to the growth of the shipments since 1873. In that year there were 39,000 tons of shipping registered at Cardiff, while now there were 150,000 tons. The population then was under 60,000, but it now stood at over 125,000. The dock acreage of Cardiff and Penarth had in the same period increased from about 90 acres to 139 acres, and in addition to that 79 acres in the course of some months would be opened at Barry, about eight miles from Cardiff. (Cheers.) Referring to the shipbuilding trade, he said that there had been much over-building going on, and if it continued at the same rate there would be more ships than there were cargoes. It was most cheering to see an improvement in trade generally. In reference to that the statistics of the Board of Trade were remarkable. They showed that, taking the exports and imports together, there had been an increase in 1888 over 1887 for the first eight months of no less than £24,389,000, and it was gratifying to find that this had been an increase all round. There had been no decrease except upon some dutiable articles, including tobacco. One of the most important questions which they had to consider was how best to maintain this improvement. He had very little faith in the good that Parliament could do to commerce—(hear, hear)—but he thought they must look to education, industry, and perseverance as the means of increasing the commercial prosperity of this country. (Cheers). The State might assist in promoting education, and particularly technical education, which was necessary not merely for artisans, but for all those who embarked in commercial pursuits. The Government might also help them by defending particular interests from attacks such as those made upon English commerce by the sugar bounties. They were indebted to Baron H. De Worms for the way in which he had convinced ten or eleven foreign countries that the system of bounties was injurious. There could be no doubt that the pernicious system had now received its deathblow. One result of the recent conference had been a movement for promoting beet cultivation in Ireland, where they would all be delighted to see prosperity springing up. (Cheers.) Another matter on which the Government could aid them would be in the appointment of a Minister of Commerce, and he expressed the hope that the Government would take the matter up. While they might congratulate themselves upon the improved position of commerce, they must regret the depression which still hung over agriculture. (Hear, hear.) He did not think that their commercial prosperity would be permanent until agriculture again flourished.

Sir JACOB BEHRENS, on behalf of the Bradford Chamber, moved a resolution approving of the Government bill for the promotion of technical instruction, and among other suggestions proposing that provision should be made for the admission to technical schools of children whose parents or guardians were unable to pay the fees, the expenses to be defrayed by a local rate, with a minimum of 1d in the pound.

Mr. CHAMBERS (London) seconded the resolution.

Mr. MUMBY (Portsmouth), while supporting the resolution generally, opposed the proposal that the minimum rate to be levied should be a penny.

Mr. GROSER (Plymouth), making the same exception with regard to the rate, supported the resolution. He moved as a rider: "That in any future bill for the advance of technical education provision should be made for direct and substantial assistance being afforded to technical schools which have been established by voluntary contributions."

Mr. MACLEAN, M.P., and others joined in urging Sir J. Behrens to withdraw that part of his resolution which was objected to.

After some further discussion Sir J. Behrens agreed to withdraw the clause objected to, and accepted the addition proposed by Mr. Groser. The resolution as amended was then adopted.

Mr. MATES (Leicester) moved that School Boards or other local authorities should have full liberty to give technical education at whatever stage they think fit; also that, in order to the successful introduction of technical instruction into elementary schools, it was absolutely essential that there should be some modification of the present system of payment by results, or that the education code should be so altered that the schools might not suffer by serious diminution of the Government grant. After a debate the resolution was lost by a considerable majority.

Mr. H. O. ARNOLD FOSTER (London) moved a resolution approving of the scheme of commercial education drafted by the special committee of the London Chamber of Commerce, which was carried.

On the motion of Mr. ROBERTS (on behalf of the South of Scotland Chamber), seconded by Mr. ATKINS (Oldham), a resolution was adopted approving of the recommendations contained in the report of the Select Committee of both Houses of Parliament on private bill legislation, and urging the desirability of hastening legislation on the lines indicated in the report.

Mr. CORBETT, of Worcester, next moved a resolution affirming the desirability of facilities being afforded for the authorisation, without special application to Parliament, of inexpensive lines of railway adapted for slow traffic, to meet the requirements of thinly-populated districts, and that the county councils about to be constituted would appear to be suitable authorities for investigating schemes and granting provisional orders. Mr. Corbett said there were small towns in England which now had no railway communication at all, and it would greatly increase trade and commerce if such towns and villages were brought within reach of railway communication.

Mr. LESTER (North Stafford) seconded the motion, and it was carried.

Mr. WAUGH, of Bradford, moved that no companies bill would be satisfactory to the commercial community which did not provide better security than now existed against the formation of fraudulent companies. The resolution was also in favour of winding up insolvent limited companies in the local courts of bankruptcy in the manner and by the same procedure as private firms. Mr. Waugh said that this might seem a drastic measure, but he contended that it was a just one, and would put a stop to the formation of fraudulent companies. The resolution was carried.

The meeting adjourned until to-day, and the representatives left by train to view the Bute Docks. In the evening the mayor entertained them at a conversazione, followed by a ball.

THE WHITE DRAWING ROOM.—A Gentleman writes: "Whatever I do I do thoroughly. I determined to renovate everything in my drawing room with 'Aspinall's White Enamel,' so I had all the furniture and woodwork well pumice-stoned, then painted one coat. When that was hard I had it again pumice-stoned, then another coat of 'Aspinall,' and when that was hard I repeated the pumice-stoning process, and put on a third coat of 'Aspinall,' and the effect is beautiful beyond description; a perfectly hard marble surface, white as snow, and smooth as glass."

ASPINALL'S ENAMEL is sold everywhere, or sent post free in tins, 9d., 1s. 6d., and 3s. (for baths, 1s. 9d. and 3s. 6d.), from the Works, Peckham, London. Colour cards, showing over 100 tints, free on application.

Scholarships, &c., of the value of £2,000 may be awarded annually; among these are included three Andrews Entrance prizes of the value of £30 each, the examination for which begins on Sept. 27. The regulations as to these and any further information as to classes, prizes, &c., may be obtained from the Secretary.

ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL MEDICAL SCHOOL, Albert Embankment, London, S.E.

The WINTER SESSION of 1888-89 will commence on Oct. 1, when an introductory address will be delivered by Dr. Cullingworth, at three p.m.

Two entrance science scholarships of 125 guineas and £60 respectively, open to all first-year students, will be offered for competition. The examination will be held on Sept. 26, 27, and 28, and the subjects will be chemistry and physics, with either botany or zoology, at the option of candidates.

Special classes are held throughout the year for the "Preliminary Scientific" and "Intermediate M.B." examinations of the University of London.

An additional laboratory for the teaching of advanced physiology has been recently provided.

All hospital appointments are open to students without extra charge.

Scholarships and money prizes of considerable value are awarded at the sessional examinations, as also several medals.

The fees may be paid in one sum or by instalments. Entries may be made to lectures or to hospital practice, and special arrangements are made for students entering in their second or subsequent years; also for dental students and for qualified practitioners.

Medical practitioners, clergymen, and private families residing in the neighbourhood receive students for residence and supervision, and a register of approved lodgings is kept in the secretary's office.

Prospectuses and all particulars may be obtained from the Medical Secretary, Mr. George Rendle.

E. NETTLESHIP, Dean.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN THE WORLD.

THE SALE OF THE DAILY TELEGRAPH AMOUNTS TO AN AVERAGE WHICH, IF TESTED, WILL SHOW AN EXCESS OF HALF A MILLION COPIES WEEKLY OVER ANY OTHER MORNING PAPER.

LONDON, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26.

Details have now been received of the results of the attack on the Thibetans in the Jelapla Pass. Four hundred of the enemy were killed and wounded, and the British success was complete, with no losses.

Mr. Dillon, M.P., occupied the chair at the fortnightly meeting of the National League in Dublin last night, and this being his first public appearance since his release he was warmly cheered. After giving some account of his prison life, the hon. gentleman justified his action with respect to the Plan of Campaign, which he believed would have had the hearty support of Thomas Davis and John Mitchel had they been alive. If any man produced a better or more practicable policy he would not hesitate to advise the Irish people to adopt it, but meanwhile he could not counsel them to fall back upon the Ribbon Lodge, or to a condition of things which would leave Captain Moonlight master of the field.

A meeting of the Council of the National Rifle Association was held yesterday to consider whether Cannock Chase or Berkshire Downs should be chosen as the future site of the annual competitions of the Association. After prolonged deliberation, Captain Pixley moved a resolution in favour of the Berkshire Downs; but this was met by an amendment, moved by the Earl of Wemyss, to the effect that before adopting either of the sites named further inquiries should be made as to the possibility of obtaining a place within reasonable distance of London. The amendment was carried, and a committee was appointed to seek the co-operation of the Government.

Yesterday the autumnal meeting of the Associated Chambers of Commerce was opened at Cardiff. Colonel Hill, the president, delivered an address, in which he traced the remarkable material progress which that town has made during the last fifteen years. Resolutions were adopted approving of the Government bill for the promotion of technical education, and of the scheme of commercial education drafted by the London Chamber. Another motion which was carried affirmed the desirability of facilities being afforded for the authorisation, without special application to Parliament, of inexpensive lines of railway for slow traffic.

Baron de Ville, a French gentleman, residing in Bedfordshire, was charged at the Leighton Buzzard Police-court yesterday with assaulting a little boy, who, with other children, had been playing on land belonging to the defendant. The Bench imposed a fine of £1 and costs.

James Gloster, a medical practitioner, was again put on his trial at the Central Criminal Court yesterday, on the charge of causing the death of Eliza Jane Schumacher, a married woman living apart from her husband, by performing an unlawful operation. The prosecution mainly relied on a statement made by the woman before she died, and the question was raised whether she was at that time in "the settled and hopeless expectation of death." The learned judge came to the conclusion that she was not, and that the statement could not be admitted as evidence. Counsel for the prosecution thereupon decided not to proceed further, and, it having been intimated that there was ample evidence to establish the absolute innocence of the accused, the jury returned a verdict of acquittal.

James Mackill, aged twenty-one, a Scotch workman, was brought up at the Marylebone Police-court yesterday, charged with causing the death of John King by throwing him out of a train in the Haverstock-hill tunnel of the Midland Railway. The principal witness was Detective-Inspector Banister, who had made inquiries in Glasgow and Hamilton, and brought the prisoner in custody to London. The accused was remanded.

A large amount of business was done yesterday on the Stock Exchange. Home Railways were buoyant, especially North British and Brighton "A." Canadian and Mexican (Vera Cruz) were also better; but American lines receded. Foreign Government bonds were dull, on balance. As regards Spanish copper shares, Mason and Barry continued firm, and Rio Tinto declined. Diamond mines rose a little. Consols relapsed ⅛ per cent. At the Bank a net efflux of £8,000 in gold was reported.

YESTERDAY the Associated Chambers of Commerce opened their annual conference, Cardiff being the chosen scene this year for that combination of business with pleasure in which the magnates of trade and industry take delight. That the gathering will be a complete success we are justified in inferring from the choice of locality and from the present circumstances of trade. The industrial capital of South Wales, sitting like a queen among her coalfields and iron works, her splendid docks, and her network of converging railways, is both prosperous and hospitable. She can communicate much that is of interest to Yorkshire and Northumberland as well as Lanarkshire, and can show probably more of the picturesque element in commerce than most other towns of greater extent and antiquity. The rapid growth of Cardiff is one of the most striking facts of modern English history, and supplies the latest and most conspicuous illustration of the skill, public spirit, and energy with which vast natural resources have been utilised by their fortunate possessors. No outlay of capital was grudged to make the port one of the most accessible and commodious in Great Britain, so that the mineral treasures of the district might at a minimum of delay and cost be rendered available for the world's markets. Local enthusiasm speaks of Cardiff as having earned the proud distinction of being in some respects the first port in the Kingdom, and it is at least certain that it yields to none in profitable and progressive development, and in the intelligent appropriation of all the advantages of its natural position. The best characteristics of British enterprise, in fact, are embodied in the Cardiff we now see. It is as purely a creation of the second half of the nineteenth century as Barrow or Middlesbro', and like them owes its existence industrially to the iron ore which is so indispensable an adjunct and instrument of modern civilisation. Of late a new lease of prosperity has been entered upon, checked by only partial and intermittent drawbacks, and although a rival dock and railway scheme threatened at one time to detract from the commercial predominance of the town and port by providing a nearer and cheaper outlet to the industries of a particular district than Cardiff can offer, the result bids fair to be an expansion of trade, by which all alike will benefit, and a stimulus to that kind of competition which is the stepping-stone to all success in commerce when the field is a fair one and the prizes are conspicuously within reach.

The Associated Chambers, moreover, meet under much happier auspices than on some recent occasions, for business is at present flourishing, and there is no serious cloud over its prospects in any direction. When the last Conference was held at Cardiff, exactly fifteen years ago, commercial affairs also promised well, and South Wales, although not free from trade disputes of a grave character, had made a fair start on a career of prosperity, never since materially checked except for brief periods. What the Cardiff of 1873 was to the stately and populous mart now the pride of the Bristol Channel, the commerce of Great Britain then was, compared to its present bulk and ramifications. From this point of view the Associated Chambers may derive comfort, and may use language of hearty mutual gratulation. After an interval of depression national enterprise has worked its way to the front again, and rejoices in lucrative markets and an expanding horizon of demand for its productions. The Chambers of Commerce might effect much practical good if they would throw the light of personal experience on the causes of this gratifying recovery. Most of their members will readily admit that the brighter prospects now compared with those witnessed two years ago are not due to the application of any empirical remedies, warranted to work wonders, but to the slow operation of natural laws, inexorable as fate, and to the common sense which knows how to make use of the opportunities thus presented. It was not currency systems, not blundering legislation, nor even protective policies that directly caused the depression of a few years ago, but over-production and over-speculation, the customary fruits of long-continued prosperity inflated to danger-point. And, until these effects had worn off, revival of trade on a healthy basis was impossible, although from other quarters, such as by the opening of new markets, partial improvement was derived. When the opening came for revived industry by the renewal of wants which had been for some time in abeyance and by the exhaustion of those superfluous materials which previous years of labour had accumulated before their time, then the English manufacturer showed that he had profited by the lessons of earlier periods of trial. Commerce has now become a fine art, and, despite all the vaunts of more or less successful rivals, fostered by Protection and coddled on bounties, it will, we think, be generally admitted that among the most expert professors of that art Englishmen must still be counted. Else, how happens it that even countries which have devoted much capital and energy to the development of particular industries—Germany, France, and the United States, for instance—should, whenever the need arises, have at once to enter English markets to obtain both the quantities and the qualities of whatever they require? The countries enumerated are great iron producers as well as consumers, and their metal industries are guarded from the intrusion of foreigners by stringent tariffs; but, in spite of this, Americans, Germans, and Frenchmen find it to their advantage to buy iron and steel here in enormous quantities, to procure their machinery in England, handicapped as it is by heavy duties, and to have ships built for their great steamship companies at Sunderland and on the Clyde, although the builders of their own country are helped by a bountiful subsidy to underbid the Englishman if possible. Truth to say, whether or not he has benefitted by the discussions on technical education and design, the English maker has had the good sense to profit by the advantages which open ports and the command of the best skilled labour, as well as of the cheapest raw material, give him, and can therefore hold his own against any competitor who may have even considerable odds in his favour. While the recognition of this fact need not blunt the edge of the Conference's denunciation of protective tariffs, it is satisfactory to see that the intelligence and the counsel largely disseminated by the instrumentality of the Chambers have done something to neutralise the evils of Protection by showing the unhampered producer how most effectually to combat them.

In regular course, the customary programme of such Conferences will be gone through, and the old grievances, as well as the various "fads" which are never absent on these occasions, will be formally aired and examined. Bankruptcy reform, bounties, trade marks, labour disputes, employers' liabilities, bi-metallism, and protection, will claim a hearing. If the good of these discussions is not always apparent, there is no doubt that the suggestions thrown out, are of great ultimate benefit to each class of trader, and are often a potent encouragement. The Conference, however, will find that there is no subject so interesting as the enlargement of existing, and the opening of fresh, markets. A relaxation of protective tariffs would meet the first end, and the successful traveller secures the second. How much British industries have yet to gain from the opening out of Africa no one will venture to predict, but it would be strange, and also intolerable, if the lion's share did not fall to them. It has often been charged as a serious defect in the English merchant or manufacturer, that he shows little anxiety to study the tastes and prejudices of his foreign customers, and to cultivate style and appearance as well as excellence of material, offering rather what he considers best for them than what they think best for themselves. This habit, according to the testimony of various British Consuls, leads to the loss of one market after another, the successful interloper being either the ubiquitous and ingenious Yankee, or the plodding German, with imitation Sheffield and Manchester wares. Further, the English manufacturer, it is alleged, is not half diligent enough in making his goods known by sample and by the glib tongue of a business representative, and so allows himself to be cut out in more than one region, which he might, if he chose, monopolise. Whatever foundation there may be for these charges, they are not likely to apply to Africa, where English goods will have to face a competition for which their makers have long been prepared; but undoubtedly, in order to secure all the benefit of that and other markets, the greatest vigilance, energy, and adaptability must be exerted, and if the Chambers of Commerce do nothing else than emphasise this warning they will not have met in vain. With respect to the incidence of protective tariffs, it is doubtful if much good is effected by discussing the point. Foreign nations will certainly not like their tariffs the less because they find Englishmen grumbling at them, and even as regards the Presidential contest in the United States, to praise the liberal views of the Democrats would only be to play into the hands of the advocates of further restriction. Better show the advantages of free trade by the unsolicited spectacle of a great commercial nation enriched and aggrandised by the practice of its laws.

MANY curiosities have been brought to light by the pick of the navvy, but the latest find of this useful implement is certainly among the strangest of its discoveries. If report may be credited, it has just unearthed a toad of an exceptionally advanced age. One of the workmen engaged in the excavation of a railway cutting in Scotland dislodged this venerable batrachian from a bed of clay, in which it is believed to have been reposing for a period variously computed at from twenty to thirty thousand years. It is alive, but "very inactive and semi-torpid"—and small blame to it, under all the circumstances of the case. It seems, adds the narrator, "to have no bones," though it would be popularly said to have "made old ones," and "its legs bend any way," which is not surprising, considering its general "flexibility of adaptation" to what must, to say the least of it, have been an inconvenient environment. "It has two beautiful eyes," in which it resembles "She" of Mr. RIDER HAGGARD's novel, though it has beaten that lady's "record" by many thousand years. "Its mouth is sealed up, but it seems to breathe, though very slightly, through its nostrils," yet how it breathed embedded in clay it is indeed, as Mr. PATTERSON remarks, "hard to say." "If," he continues, "it is twenty thousand or thirty thousand years since the glacial period when the clay was deposited, this toad goes a long way back into hoary antiquity"; and so unquestionably he does, though it rather detracts from the force of the remark to add that he was probably contemporaneous with the progenitors of MENES "himself." The progenitors of that early Egyptian potentate, who were coeval with the toad, must have been very remote progenitors indeed. Why, MENES and his misty dynasty are a more mushroom growth of yesterday as compared with the geological formation from which this reverend reptile has been routed out. We will not say that MENES had no living—that is to say, no human—progenitor at the date of this multi-millenarian's retirement from public life, though that is a point which might perhaps be open to question. It is even possible that MENES had ancestors not only living at that period, but—such is the stupendous antiquity of Egyptian civilisation according to some Egyptologists—actually practising at that date some of the simpler constructive arts. A fragment of red brick was found by LINANT Bey in a boring seventy-two feet deep in the Nilotic alluvium; and M. ROSIÈRE, in his great work on Egypt, has estimated the mean rate of deposit of sediment in the delta of the Nile at some two inches and a half per century, which would prove the existence of a brick-making race in Egypt, able to give themselves infinite airs of superiority over the Stone and Flint men, exactly thirty thousand years ago. So that although the toad is individually older than the Egyptian brickmaker, who has been long outlived by the work of his hands, it is in no position to swagger over the race of man, as one who has witnessed—though not, it is true, from "a good place in the house," so to speak—the whole performance of the great drama of humanity from its very humble and roughly acted prologue to its present scenes of high sensational interest. Possibly, however, the toad may catch at the suggestion of Sir CHARLES LYELL, that these Nile-bank borings may have been made at a spot where an arm of the river has been silted up, so that the brick in question would be comparatively modern.

Anyhow, there is a certain ungraciousness in comparing dates after this fashion. Age, after all, is relative, and, if this toad is thirty thousand—or even only twenty thousand—years old, it has attained to a very respectable time of life; but is it really so ancient? Were its predecessors? For, though it is a record-breaker among toads, it is only the latest of a series of these prehistoric finds—actually as venerable as they were represented? And this, assuming that no mistake is made as to the geological epoch of the "locus in quo," is only another form of the question, whether the toad was veritably dug out of the stratum in which it is alleged to have been found. In the present case, for instance, was "clay of the glacial period" in very truth the "locus in quo"? or was it in only the "locus juxta quem"? Did the imprisoned reptile leap to light from the "early formation" in which, if it really were immured, it must have been imprisoned for countless ages? Or did it merely emerge from some piece of soil in the neighbourhood of the early formation into which it may have crawled the day before yesterday? In most of these discoveries the evidence rests upon the statements of men who are neither geologists nor biologists, nor trained observers at all; and we are not sure that there is any better evidence in the case before us. Mr. PATTERSON certainly offers none on his own account. The deplorable ambiguity of the English past participle at first inspired the hope that he was about to testify as an eye-witness. "I have to-day," he writes, "just seen a toad taken out of a bed of clay"; but alas! the sentence proceeds, "on Tuesday last," showing thereby that it is not to the taking of the toad, but only to having seen it after it was taken, that Mr. PATTERSON depones. It would be well if in these cases the statement of the navvy who delivered the liberating blow with the pick were to be embodied in a statutory declaration—a course, it may be remembered, which is always adopted, as soon as the circumstances permit, by the skipper and first mate who were the last persons privileged to behold the gambols of the sea-serpent. A similar course has not yet been adopted with the "gigantic gooseberry," but it will probably be found desirable, in course of time and in face of the growth of scepticism, to have resort to the same mode of convincing the incredulous. At the same time, and in all seriousness, we would not be understood as classing these stories of buried batrachia with the other wonders to which we have referred. The faculty of hybernation possessed by some animals in itself suffices to show that vital processes can be suspended for periods of time which, though short in comparison with ages, are themselves ages contrasted with the time within which life would become extinct in the waking body if unsustained by food.

Much, moreover, of our natural tendency to scepticism in cases of this kind arises from our taking too material a view of life, and fixing our attention rather upon its external and invisible activities than on the latent and mysterious force which creates them, and which need no more be affected by their suspension than electricity by the cessation of a thunderstorm. Many a man who finds the prehistoric toad incredible has little or no difficulty in believing what, indeed, has been more than once demonstrated on irrefragable evidence—that seeds which have lain dormant for many centuries will, if the conditions have been favourable to their preservation, bear fruit as though they were only a year old. Yet, as a matter of fact, the marvel is not really one whit less in the one case than in the other—the germinative power in a seed being just as liable to extinction under unfavourable conditions as the life of an animal. We forget, too, how short the periods which exhaust our feeble imaginations in the effort to conceive them appear to Nature. If a thousand years are to her but as a day, the toad's imprisonment has, according to her reckoning, lasted, on the longest computation, only a month—the length of a light sentence under the Crimes Act. At any rate, we have no mind to imitate the unlucky example of the late Sir GEORGE LEWIS's attack on the belief in the centenarianism of men, and run a tilt against the faith in millenarianism—and upwards—among the toads. It should certainly be much more agreeable to any philosophical mind to believe than to doubt that a specimen of the genus "rana" has passed thirty thousand years in the clay, and lives to tell the tale. His very existence would be a rebuke to the restless spirit of the present age. If it be truly the fact that Bufo retired to his more than monastic solitude such "a dateless while" ago, and has been silently meditating there from that day to this, he has rendered us real service as an allegory. Many things have happened since he secluded himself. Man has advanced from a comparatively insignificant position on the terrestrial globe to a place of considerable importance, and perhaps would not care to be reminded by the toad of the very humble beginnings in which the recluse must as well remember having seen him before his retirement. He has accomplished his rise in the world at the cost of considerable discomfort to himself and others, and with a vast amount of necessary and unnecessary fuss. The toad all the while has sat by plunged in his interminable reverie, a type of the unchanging East in presence of the unsleeping West. And now that the toad has been released, and has rejoined the company of the "arrived" species, whom he remembers a struggling young variety recently developed from the higher apes, he will find, if he makes inquiries among them, that, after all their noise, they know no more about their destiny than they did at starting, and that he has really lost nothing by "saving himself," as he has done, for thirty thousand years.

IT really appears high time that the various sections of people who devote their lives and labours to the study of the Drink Question should make up their mind as to simple fundamental points, and chief among these points seems the apparently easy task of defining what alcohol is. All the early temperance societies, such as that started at Moreau, in the State of New York, in 1808, and the Wexford Society, inaugurated by the Reverend GEORGE WHITMORE CARR in Ireland, in 1829, seem to have agreed that by alcohol was meant ardent spirits, and they abjured the same except for medical purposes, but "the moderate use of other liquors was not excluded." Then it was found that wine and beer contained alcohol, and the "pledge" taken against its use became broad and comprehensive indeed, culminating in the sudden bursting into existence of the "teetotallers." The notable word is said to owe its origin to the utterance of one "DICKY TURNER," a plasterer's labourer or "lime-larry," who, in inveighing in his own Lancashire dialect against the old form of moderate abstention, exclaimed, "I'll hev nowt to do wi' this moderation botheration pledge; I'll be reet down tee-tee-total for ever and ever." "Well done, DICKY!" said Mr. LIVESEY; "that shall be the name of our new pledge." This is said to have occurred in 1833, and the sect has gone on ever since, with its name taken from an old Lancashire phrase for final, thorough, or complete. The Moderate party almost disappeared, and Father MATHEW in Ireland and the movement known as Good Templarism, which originated in America, spread the teetotal crusade. Then the physiologists and sociologists had their say, and certain schools of politicians annually brought forward a prohibitive and confiscating scheme akin to the Maine Liquor Law, which is now modified to a Permissive or Local Option Bill; yet while the war raged, and even as it rages now, between the moderate abstainers and the teetotallers, it became quite obvious that both parties must drink something to enable them to carry on the conflict. Good water was not always obtainable, milk did not agree with every constitution; tea and coffee taken in large quantities were found to have untoward and disastrous effects on the nervous system, and so a new group of "medicated wines" and "Temperance beverages" were invented, and the virtues of phosphates, iron, and sundry drugs were much lauded; effervescing drinks were manufactured and christened, often with lofty classic titles, and sent forth to the sober public as a substitute for the pernicious soul and body destroying stuff they were wont to drink in their unregenerate days. The pop of the "non-alcoholic" cork was heard in the land, and the people congratulated themselves, and proposed to stick to virtue and cakes, and leave the ale alone, saving when it had "non-alcoholic," or "ginger," or "sanitary," or "temperance" writ large upon the bottle, and was accompanied by a formidable analysis.

In this way, the "medicated wine," which always gave itself airs as a dose, and would have been called a drink, came rapidly to the front. It was nice to discover in a long list of symptoms, frequently of the most contradictory character, printed on a bottle of, say, "COCKER's concentrated citrate of cinnamon," or "PILGARLICK's pure phosphated early Purl," some delicate suggestion of one's own pet physical grievance, and find that a glass of the mixture with soda water would not only cure you, but "form an agreeable and exhilarating beverage." No alcohol lurked insidiously therein; for was it not "guaranteed" and capsuled, and fitted out with testimonials and letters from "persons of quality who have used the article"? The whole prospect was little short of arriving at a sort of non-alcoholic Arcadia, when the dream was somewhat rudely dispelled by the report, just presented to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for the year which ended March last, by the Principal of the Laboratory at Somerset House. That astute chemist detected in such matters as "British Port" and "British Sherry" sold by holders of sweets licences so much foreign wine that he was able successfully to prosecute the vendors for selling foreign wine without a licence. Then, observing that every year there appears to arise an increased difficulty in keeping the sale of liquids containing alcohol in their legitimate channels, he turned his attention to these mild-mannered and highly respectable "medicated wines." He finds that "it appears to have been in many instances a study to place before the public coca and other wines, which, professing to possess medicinal properties, are so prepared that as regards flavour, and the size and frequency of the dose recommended, they are evidently intended for use as beverages." Thus, a thing called "Pepsi-champagne," and another liquid called "Coca-champagne," only possessed their respective solemn prefixes to distinguish them from champagnes of ordinary quality. Drinking "Pepsi," the consumer could imagine himself a patient, while he would shudder at the profligacy of indulging in a sparkling pint of any recognised brand or vintage. So after his coffee one can picture the temperance hypochondriac saying to his guest, "You will excuse me, I dare not, on principle, touch Chartreuse or Benedictine, or any of that deadly family; but I have been ordered to take a small glass of 'Riga Balsam,' and this is the moment for taking my medicine." Many would pity the poor sufferer condemned to his daily drug of a fluid ounce or so of the "Balsam," but their pity would not be so deep if they knew that the Principal of the Laboratory had discovered this said Balsam to be "a liqueur of a very pleasant flavour."

It is, however, when we come to "temperance beverages" that we find how the worthy total abstainers are being imposed upon. "Elderberry Syrup" sounds as if it might be harmlessly given to an infant to drink his own health at his own christening. Nevertheless, it contains 8·7 per cent. of proof spirit. There is a comforting sound about "non-alcoholic Ginger Cordial"; but analysis shows that there is an honest 10·8 per cent. of proof spirit in this non-alcoholic concoction. "Unfermented sherry" ought surely to be as blameless as King ARTHUR himself; but, for all that, there is 17·0 per cent. of the dangerous element lurking therein. Finally, we would have thought that the gentle and agreeable and domestic drink, so rustic and innocent, so dear to the heart of such good men as Dr. PRIMROSE, and the sweet inmates of his model vicarage, known as "Cowslip wine" would be a veritable CÆSAR's wife and above all suspicion. Yet "Château Primula Veris" is one of the most advanced offenders. The Laboratory of Somerset House has unmasked this impostor, and Cowslip wine stands forth pilloried and convicted of sometimes possessing no less than 28·9 per cent. of proof spirit. The Revenue department has determined that all this alcohol shall pay due and proper toll to the Nation's income; just as if it were called brandy or whiskey. The vanguard in the abstaining army are very earnest people, and it must be a jar to their nerves to find that in many cases they have been caught tripping. As for cowslip wine, we are really ashamed of it. It has lost its character for primitive purity, turned out to be a first cousin to such wicked things as gin and absinthe, and may hide its fragrant head, and retire from select Temperance Society for ever. These curious revelations show the many fallacies of those fanatical, if well-meaning, preachers, who would tell us what we should eat and what we should drink. They would fain impose on us their own system of life, their particular dietary, and personal regulations as regards beverages. Before they next cry out on the class known as moderate drinkers, they will do well to look at home, and make up their minds, first of all, what is alcohol, and then how much of it must be present in any given potation to bring it under the ban of their creed. The advocates of tolerance have no objection to the Templars indulging in their syrups and unfermented sherries, provided they pay duty thereon, and now that these little disclosures have peeped out, it is not too much to ask for some reasonableness on the part of all who seek for solace in the elderberry, and look upon the cowslip when it is red.

ON Sunday last, at Arcis-sur-Aube, M. LOCKROY, in the name of the Administration of which he is a member, unveiled, in the presence of a large and enthusiastic assemblage, a monument to the notorious GEORGES JACQUES DANTON, Member of the National Convention of France, Minister of Justice, and bosom friend of those congenial spirits ROBESPIERRE and MARAT. Public opinion throughout the civilised world will scarcely quarrel with the patriotic citizens of Arcis-sur-Aube for invoking the sculptor's art to perpetuate the lineaments of one of her most conspicuous, if not her most illustrious, sons. DANTON, whether he was or was not the ruthless chief of assassins pictured by the Royalist pamphleteer PELTIER, or the magnificent but unscrupulous scoundrel described by LAFAYETTE and by Madame ROLAND, was undeniably what the French term a "personage." Of his own commanding individuality he was himself fully conscious, for on the scaffold, just before he was strapped to the fatal plank, he turned to the executioner and said, "Show my head to the people; it is worth the trouble." It was indeed. Facially, the man whom his affectionate and devoted wife habitually spoke of as "her terrible husband" was as ugly as JACK WILKES, but he was not endowed with the wit and humour of that impudent demagogue, his temperament being usually a calm and reflective one, alternated by bursts of ferocious choler. His ugliness, it is true, was not entirely an endowment of nature. A big, strong, bold country boy, he was tossed by a bull, which, with one of its horns, gave him a hare-lip for life. This mishap did not prevent him from graduating as an amateur bull-fighter; and on a second occasion the bull so frightfully gored him as to flatten and nearly tear out his nose. Undismayed, he subsequently attacked a herd of swine, and was fearfully bitten by a savage boar. Finally, a dreadful attack of small-pox completed the devastation of his features. His want of comeliness did not prevent his becoming a great favourite with the inhabitants of his native place. He was sent to school at Troyes, and was in the class of rhetoric in 1775, when LOUIS XVI. ascended the throne. The coronation of the King and Queen at Rheims was the subject proposed for a prize essay; and the first proceeding of young DANTON as a competitor for the prize was to run away from school. He turned up some days afterwards with the essay ready written, to which the laurel was unanimously awarded; and then he explained that he had trudged on foot to Rheims and back to see how a King was made. He had a great deal to do subsequently in the unmaking of a King. Such was the sanguine youth who was to become, in process of time, a lawyer's clerk, an advocate, a Minister of Justice, and the founder of the blood-stained Revolutionary Tribunal. Throughout the Continent and in this country the name of DANTON has been, by a common consensus, execrated; but he has never been odious to the people of Arcis-sur-Aube. After his death, his two sons went quietly into business in their sire's native town. DANTON, the father, had been a very active partner in the firm of CLOTHO, LACHESIS, ATROPOS, and Co., who did such a merry business in 1793 in snipping the threads of human life. In the irony of fate, it was decreed that Messrs. DANTON SONS should prosper in the peaceful and beneficent occupation of cotton-spinning. That the elder DANTON should have a statue at Arcis-sur-Aube is, perhaps, a not very unnatural consummation of his career, although by a vast number of persons who do not think the Reign of Terror to have been precisely a Golden Age the inaugural ceremonial of last Sunday may be regarded with little less than horror.

It is related in the diary of HENRY CRABB ROBINSON that when CANOVA visited England in 1815 he once breakfasted at the house of Mr. HOPE with another illustrious sculptor—our own FLAXMAN. After breakfast the party inspected the magnificent antique marbles in the collection of the author of "Anastasius." Among them was a beautiful bust of the Emperor ANTONINUS PIUS. FLAXMAN pointed it out to CANOVA, on which the Italian artist, without answering him, muttered to himself, with gesticulations of impatience, "I told him so; I told him so; but he would never take advice." This was repeated several times, until at length the Englishman tapped CANOVA on the shoulder, and asked, "Whom did you tell so?" "Why, NAPOLEON," replied CANOVA. "I told him repeatedly that the busts of ANTONINUS PIUS were to be seen everywhere; they were to be found in the greatest abundance in every part of Italy, because he made himself so beloved. But he would not listen to me, and his courtiers were astonished at my taking such a liberty." The great sculptor, the noblest and simplest-minded of men, forgot that absolute power can ordain the creation of that which is spontaneously offered by gratitude to beneficence. NAPOLEON the Great was probably as cordially hated in his time as ANTONINUS PIUS was beloved; but the despot, while he retained his sway, was able to inundate Europe with his effigies. OLIVER CROMWELL, again, was intensely feared, but scarcely inspired any feelings of affection; yet Old NOLL's rugose lineaments are familiar to us all. Notoriety rather than the more legitimate fame which rests on virtue would appear in the main to have most to do with the multiplying of the counterfeit presentments of those who have filled a large space in the world's history; but in the particular instance of statues there are assuredly some notable exceptions to the general rule. There are plenty of engraved portraits of TITUS OATES, who, in his pensioned old age, was believed by the "serious" classes to have been a martyr to the Protestant cause; but no Nonconformist community has ever contemplated the erection of a monument to the arch-perjurer who hatched the Popish Plot, nor, on the other hand, have even the extremest advocates of free thought been bold enough to propose a statue to TOM PAINE. A monument to DANTON, therefore, is assuredly a step in advance, of which, however, the policy and the good taste may be questioned by a good many impartial critics, who, while they fully recognise the wisdom and justice of the principles of '89, decidedly dissent from the practice of '93.

As regards monumental honours to the Republican leaders, we leave the soldiers out of the question; HOCHE, MARCEAU, and the rest have long since had all due plastic honours rendered to them; but at least those valiant captains fought and bled for their country; whereas it was the lugubrious business of the civilian revolutionists to cause the blood of their fellow-citizens to flow in torrents until Nemesis inflicted on themselves the due penalty for the manifold murders which they had committed. MIRABEAU, indeed, has long since had his statue, although his remains were torn from the Panthéon by the indignant patriots who discovered after his death that the great orator and tribune of the people had been but a hireling, whose necessitous profligacy forced him to take the wages contemptuously flung to him by the Court of Versailles. Still, it must be admitted that the name of HONORÉ GABRIEL RIQUETTI, Comte DE MIRABEAU, can be mentioned now without an expletive on the part of the Republicans or a shudder on that of the Royalists. His soul was free from the taint of blood-guiltiness; he foresaw and strove to stave off the horrors which he knew must ensue from the excesses of unrestrained democracy; and, although his incorrigible dissoluteness made him venal, there can be no doubt that he had the best interests of his country at heart, and that he was himself an embodiment of the paradox that it is possible to be personally corrupt but politically honest. MIRABEAU would never have been a Terrorist; but terror was DANTON's opportunity, and on terrorism he throve, although there is possibly some exaggeration in the story of the millions which he is said to have acquired while Commissioner of the Republic in Belgium. He is accused of having lived in unbridled luxury; but it has been ascertained that up to the time of his arrest and his being consigned to the scaffold he inhabited a very modest house close to the Passage du Commerce, in Paris. Bloodthirsty as he may have been, and reckless and unscrupulous as he undoubtedly was, it is admitted, even by his foes, that he was a fond and tender husband. His wife was unfeignedly pious, and an intense Royalist; she died during her husband's absence in the Low Countries, and so passionately attached was she to him that during her last illness she made minute arrangements for his second marriage with a young lady, her intimate friend, as devout and as Royalist as herself; and the terrible Conventional was actually wearing mourning for his first wife when he was united to his second; nay, audacious sceptic as he was, he consented to the nuptial benediction being pronounced by a nonjuring priest. This is the enigmatical character touching whose virtues M. LOCKROY has been talking so eloquently at Arcis-sur-Aube, to the infinite wrath of the French Conservative press, who have, of course, revived all the ghastly accusations against DANTON of being the accomplice, if not the author, of the insurrection of the 10th of August, the massacres of September, and the slaughter of the prisoners at Versailles. The apologists of DANTON point out that no scrap of his handwriting is extant to show that he was in any way responsible for the horrors in question, and that his chief accusers are LAFAYETTE and Madame ROLAND, who personally disliked him, and the infamous PELTIER, the subsequent libeller of NAPOLEON. Altogether it might have been advisable to allow another generation to pass by before arriving at a decision whether DANTON is indeed entitled to a statue. Should French democracy continue to keep the upper hand, it may eventually pronounce that not only DANTON, but the engaging MARAT and the fascinating ROBESPIERRE are likewise entitled to the grandest of monuments.

Mr. Raikes (Postmaster-General) has appointed Mr. George Herbert to be his private secretary (unpaid), in succession to Mr. John Evelyn Gladstone.

PARIS DAY BY DAY.

[BY SPECIAL WIRE.]

[FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.]

PARIS, TUESDAY NIGHT.

A heavy storm, accompanied by torrents of rain, broke over Paris during the night, leaving the weather close and unsettled. Several showers have fallen during the day, and the atmosphere is saturated with moisture. Optimists, however, hope that this will merely prove a break in a prolonged spell of fine weather, and that Summer-sunshine and a mild temperature will linger on far into the Autumn. This is the first rain which we have had here for some weeks—the reports of inundations in the South have therefore been received with considerable surprise, if not with a spice of incredulity; but all these unfavourable accounts are fully confirmed, and we learn that the Orb has overflowed its banks, doing a vast amount of damage in the Béziers district. It is, however, satisfactory to note that the powers that be still refuse to admit that the harvest has been as bad as the Champions of Free-trade represent it to be, and that the Ministry does not regard the "agricultural out-look" as justifying any suspension of the duties on foreign cereals.

To the vast majority of his fellow-countrymen the late ex-Marshal Bazaine was dead long ago, and the attempt made a year or two since by the Comte d'Hérisson to "whitewash" the "Capitulator of Metz" went for nought. In the estimation of many French Republicans, and even Royalists, Bazaine was a traitor who sold his country, and but for the intervention of his old colleague, Marshal de Mac-Mahon, would have been deservedly shot. He was reproached because he had 200,000 trained soldiers at Metz, and instead of giving battle he remained in shelter under the guns of a fortress. Hence the death of the unlucky soldier was saluted with a chorus of semi-hysterical jubilation by the Chauvinist papers. "Metz," said one writer, "will be en fête to-day"; while another announced the news as follows: "A foreigner called Bazaine has just died in Madrid. There was a General-officer of the same name in the French Army, who, after a brilliant career, was honoured in 1870 with the command of our troops, but delivered up Metz to the German invader, and betrayed his country. He then became an object of general odium and execration, and was condemned to death. France turns her head from his coffin and passes on." Even the moderate Temps, in its obituary notice, said that "the person called Bazaine has been virtually dead for every good Frenchman since his liberation from prison," and that after the condemnation of the Council of War at Versailles the ex-Marshal ceased to belong to history. Most of the Madrid papers, however, paid tributes of respect to the memory of the deceased, for Bazaine distinguished himself during the First Carlist War of 1837, when he was a lieutenant in the Foreign-Legion which Louis Philippe sent from Algeria to help the Queen-Regent Christina against Don Carlos. For several years past Bazaine lived alone at Madrid, his wife and daughters having gone to Mexico, and his son being in a distant garrison with his regiment. Madame Bazaine was highly-esteemed in Madrid Society, but she felt her husband's position keenly, and left him for the purpose of trying to retrieve financially the falling fortunes of the family. A characteristic anecdote is related of this lady, which shows the high esteem which she entertained for her husband in his palmy days. Only a year before the outbreak of the Franco-German War of 1870, Madame Bazaine was attending an historical lecture in Nancy. The lecturer was describing the capitulation of Baylen and the manner in which General Dupont was compelled to sign it. This so moved Madame Bazaine that she cried out—"The Marshal would never have done that!" and the audience broke out into unbounded applause. Bazaine at that time commanded the 3rd Army-Corps at Nancy. Bazaine's death has called up many memories which had been buried in semi-oblivion. Thus, M. Henri Rochefort gives an interesting account to-day of a short conversation which he had with General Trochu just before the "Surrender of Metz" was announced. There had been a long consultation of the Government of National Defence, lasting till one o'clock in the morning. M. Rochefort was alone with General Trochu when the latter received a despatch which seemed to cause him much concern. "I am very anxious," said the General. "I learn that General Boyer has just left Metz with a mission from Bazaine to Frederic Charles. I fear that he will offer to surrender the town!" M. Henri Rochefort could not believe that such a thing was possible, but General Trochu, pressing his arm, exclaimed, "You do not know Bazaine. He is capable of anything!" The Parisians afterwards imagined that the Government of National Defence had kept back the news of the "Surrender of Metz," but M. Henri Rochefort declares that nothing could be further from the truth. He adds that the very day on which he landed in England after his escape from New Caledonia he was much struck with a print which he noticed in a shop-window. On one side was depicted Admiral Byng, who was anything but a traitor to his country, with a handkerchief over his eyes, standing before the men who were to shoot him, and on the other side Bazaine was to be seen gliding down the rope at the Fort Sainte-Marguerite, from which he escaped. Below was the simple legend—"This is why England has never been conquered!" M. Henri Rochefort appears thoroughly to endorse the moral, though the two cases were so widely different. M. Ranc, who also played a part in the National Defence, declares that not only did Bazaine intentionally keep his splendid army shut up in Metz, but that he did not want to beat the Germans at Gravelotte, and suffered Marshal Canrobert to be crushed at Saint-Privat. His ambition was to be a Military Dictator, just as he had wanted to be Emperor of Mexico. Had Bazaine been shot at Satory his execution would have been a great warning; but M. Ranc thinks it perhaps better that he was allowed to drag on a dishonoured life amid universal contempt. A writer who saw him often at Madrid relates that he led a wretched existence there. As years rolled on he became poorer and poorer. At first he had lived in a certain style, though he never appeared at his wife's entertainments. Latterly, however, he was almost alone. He used to go to market early in the morning and return with provisions for the day. After his wife—Pepita Pena—went back to Mexico with their two younger children, his eldest son, who is a sergeant in a Spanish infantry-regiment, was his sole companion and resource. Bazaine rarely quitted his study. He was completely soured, and used to abuse the French Army by the hour together in the most shocking manner; but no one can form any estimate of the number of insulting letters which he received, and the writer believes that all this had turned his head.

The caricaturists have been running riot this week over M. Numa Gilly's cool assertion that there are "twenty Wilsons" in the Estimates Committee. One print depicts the member for the Department of the Gard drawing aside a curtain and stepping back aghast at the sight of twenty gentlemen, whose features are identical with those of the son-in-law of ex-president Grévy, all sitting in a row in the Committee-room. Another sheet represents a buxom female, who does duty for the Committee en bloc, almost falling to the ground, with a big jug in her hand, as a servant enters with the card of a visitor, who asks as a particular favour to be permitted to view her splendid collection of "pots-de-vin." There are many other caricatures in the same style adorning the kiosques at the present moment, and the members of the Committee who have come up to town to work while their more fortunate colleagues are still at play, are in high dudgeon accordingly. Some of them have tried to pick a separate quarrel with M. Numa Gilly, but so far he has declined the challenge and contents himself with denouncing the Committee as a collective body. M. Gerville-Réache has just sent him a letter telling him that he is "un malhonnête homme;" but it seems doubtful whether even this will draw him.

Nothing could have been more lively than the meeting held last evening in the Grand Theatre at Nimes, at which the members for the Department of the Gard were to give an account of their stewardship. At the outset two of the Deputies, unable to obtain a hearing, walked out of the theatre in disgust. They had been forced to make way for their colleague, M. Numa Gilly, who has brought so many charges against the Estimates Committee; but he and the other members who were permitted to speak were repeatedly interrupted with uncomplimentary cries, and the scene became so tumultuous that not a single resolution was adopted. The meeting separated some time after midnight, in the midst of tremendous uproar.

Yesterday was the anniversary of what is generally known as the "Vexaincourt incident," which led to so much excitement. While a party of French sportsmen were shooting in a wood on the frontier, the German rifleman Kaufmann fired on them. M. de Wangen, now a sub-lieutenant in the Twelfth "Dragons," was badly wounded, and a game-keeper named Brignon was killed outright. A handsome monument has been erected at Vexaincourt in memory of Brignon, and yesterday it was inaugurated in presence of a large assembly. Extraordinary precautions had been taken by the authorities against any untoward event. Strong detachments of gendarmes and douaniers had been sent to the spot, and many of them were told off to prevent visitors from venturing across the frontier. On the other side of the boundary line the German gendarmerie had also mustered in some force, and the two parties surveyed each other without exchanging a word. All went well during the ceremony, but there was a lively quarrel amongst the French present, when a workman was seen to be engraving on the pedestal the figures "1870-18..," the favourite device of the Patriotic League, which leaves the date of the "War of Revenge" to the imagination of the reader. M. Gerber, a police-official who deals specially with frontier matters, hurried up, and requested that this inscription might be at once erased. An altercation ensued. M. Gerber said that the Mayor would give the order. "By no means!" was the retort. The Mayor was the cousin of Brignon, and was with the sportsmen when he was shot. Soon a man was seen rushing up in his shirt-sleeves and his waistcoat wide open. It was the Mayor, and, what was more, he ordered the inscription to be removed. "Where is your scarf?" cried the other party. Nothing daunted, the Mayor ordered another workman to erase the figures. Meanwhile, hot words were being exchanged between another Mayor, M. Hano, of Raon l'Etape, and a retired captain, as well as between other gentlemen. Two duels are expected to come off. While this strange scene was being enacted at the foot of the "Patriotic monument" the German gendarmes were looking over their boundary calmly but grimly watching what was going on; the frantic gestures, the insults, and the exchange of cards, if not blows. Their report would be worth reading.

M. Hyacinthe Loyson delivered an address on Sunday at his church in the Rue d'Arras on the relations between Church and State, which is attracting some attention. The ex-Carmelite is an independent speaker; he says what he means, and is not ashamed of his opinions. Although he had expressly requested the congregation not to indulge in any demonstrations of approval or the reverse during the discourse he was repeatedly interrupted by hearty applause. Inter alia, he argued that the Church of Rome no longer represented Catholicism. He then turned his attention to the Republic, declaring that if it were to fall within a year this would be a terrible disaster, as a political and religious reaction fatal to Liberty would at once set in. M. Hyacinthe Loyson thinks indeed that the Republic may succumb. It is true that the Republicans have had the good sense to keep out of war; but they have not paid proper attention to financial matters, nor have they succeeded in creating the "République de paysans," to borrow M. Jules Ferry's expression. The Republicans have forgotten that the peasant respects Religion. At the conclusion of his address M. Hyacinthe Loyson prayed that France might be preserved from a shameful fall.

No abatement has taken place in the agitation among the employés of the Post and Telegraph Department, and last evening a stormy meeting was held at the Salle Wagram, during which, amid considerable uproar, a resolution was voted expressive of sympathy with the Delegates who had been punished by the authorities, and challenging the Director General to act in a similar manner towards those who had adhered to this motion. An old "hand," amid tremendous tumult, assured the "juniors" that they were on the wrong track, that M. Coulon was not to blame, but that a former Minister was really responsible for the "démoralisation" of the Postal administration. He, however, was at length shouted down, and, after a few words and hints as to the mischief which the employés were in a position to commit, the meeting dispersed slowly. To-day the Director-General has deemed it necessary to post up on the walls of the Central-Office in the Rue de Grenelle a clause of the "Regulations" setting forth that any one tampering with the telegraphic apparatus is liable to imprisonment varying from three months to two years, and to a fine not exceeding £40 sterling. There is no doubt that many of the clerks are highly excited by the injustice with which, as they maintain, nearly thirty of their number have lately been treated.

Swindlers seem to have found Paris a veritable "Happy Hunting ground" of late, and rarely has the Detective Department been so actively employed. After the dashing Allmayer and Catusse, Touche à Tout, Lacaillo, and other members of the metropolitan "long-firm" which has lately been discovered in full working order by the Sûreté, another swell-mobsman, who gave himself out as the "Count de Marsan," has been arrested at Caen. The sham nobleman went about Cabourg and other seaside-places in a most dashing style. He had horses and chariots, fine clothes and lovely females. His breast blazed with gold and diamonds, and he played his part so well that he easily succeeded in victimising several local tradesmen. He combined burglary with swindling, and in a suite of rooms which he occupied at Caen were found pictures, tapestry, and artistic objects heaped in promiscuous profusion. This worthy is supposed to have had some connection with Allmayer and the Catusse-band, for he was frequently seen in company with other suspected persons who frequently caroused in his rooms during his absence. The police are, in the meantime, confident that they will soon have clues to many of the burglaries and robberies which have taken place during the past twelve-months or so in Paris and the Provinces. The arrest of the eleven "suspects," including the fellow Lebouteiller, which has just been made by M. Goron, is the ground for this supposition. It was in the pocket of Lebouteiller that a letter was found from Allmayer's fellow-prisoner the other day. Lebouteiller had just completed twenty-eight days' service in the Engineers at the Military-school, when he was pounced upon by the detectives, who marched him off to prison as soon as he had taken off his uniform and donned civilian's clothes. He used to pass as a Captain of Artillery in Paris, and had a complete suit of uniform in his rooms. His accomplices were an ex-butcher from Belleville, who was pompously proclaimed "a great Hungarian Count"—Kammuth by name—two ex-convicts, who passed as the servants of the "swells"; a cashier or receiver, and a galaxy of gutter-girls, who were all gorgeously arrayed by their opulent "protectors." The cashier of the band was a Belleville blackguard, by name Panthon, who had organised a most efficient vehicular service, for the purpose of speedily carrying away the results of the numerous burglaries which had been committed by the fraternity in Paris and its vicinity. Panthon, when arrested, told the police that he was a New-Yorker, and in the service of a nobleman, but his Belleville accent soon betrayed him. It is said that some letters from English money-changers were found in the possession of the "accountant-general of the band," and from these documents it would appear that the burglars were trying to convert into cash some of the shares and securities which they had stolen in the house of a Paris tradesman.

One of those unpopular people called concierges, who in many Parisian dwellings act as porters, police-spies, rent-receivers, and general representatives of the landlord, recently found more than his match in Isidore Paquin, a tenant whom he summoned before the Tribunals yesterday. The head and front of Paquin's offending was, primo, that he had led the landlord and the concierge a terrible life owing to his overweening taste for going to law, and, secundo, that he had threatened to blow out the brains of M. Aubry, the concierge in question. M. Paquin, so far as paying his rent went, was an exemplary and punctual locataire, but he had not been three months in the house when he had it inundated by stamped-paper containing summonses addressed to the landlord and the porter. Moreover M. Paquin also had a fashion of making faces at his concierge and of unduly soiling the steps and pavement which it was M. Aubry's duty to clean every morning. In consequence of these "high crimes and misdemeanours" M. Paquin received notice to quit in company with a damsel who was not his wife but shared his bed and board. On getting the notice to déguerpir M. Paquin procured a revolver and spoke about shooting Aubry, who ran off for the police. M. Paquin was prosecuted, and although he said that he had no intention of shooting, and that he had lost his temper because Aubry called him names reflecting not only on M. Paquin but on the damsel of his choice, the dangerous locataire was condemned to a fine.

On the Bourse to-day the last quotations were: Three per Cents., 83f 30c (a fall of 17½c); Four and a Half per Cents., 105f 75c (a fall of 10c); Italians, 97f 52½c (a fall of 2½c); Turks, 15f 77½c (a rise of 15c); Spanish-Exteriors, 76f 5c; Egyptian-Unified, 432f 50c; ditto Preference, 520f; and Ottoman-Bank, 553f. Suez-Canal shares closed at 2,267f 50c; and Rio Tinto at 596f. Home funds continue weak, and there was another fall in Three per Cents. and Four and a Half per Cents., for which the conflict that has broken out between the employés of the Posts and Telegraphs and the heads of that Department was partly responsible. Most of the foreign stocks were dull, though Turks closed with a substantial rise. There was a fall of 1f 25c in Suez-Canal shares.

A hundred and four convicts were shipped at Saint Martin de Ré yesterday, for transportation to French Guiana.

IS MARRIAGE A FAILURE?

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—Your correspondent "Anglo-German," after describing—on the whole, very fairly—the leading characteristics of matrimonial relations in the Fatherland, arrives at the conclusion that "marriage quite fulfils its object from the German point of view"; and, "taking one consideration with another," after the impartial manner of Mr. Gilbert's philosophic police-sergeant, I am inclined to believe that the "connubiality" to which Anthony Weller's uxorious temperament caused him to fall a "victim" works very satisfactorily in the Fatherland, where there are certainly—in proportion to the population—fewer brutal husbands and frivolous wives than in this country. I was a resident in Germany, on and off, for something like twelve years, during which I steadfastly foregathered with the natives, preferring their society to that of the "strangers within their gates," even when these latter happened to be of British birth; and I found that harmony was the rule, and discord the exception, in the families which I frequented, comprising pretty nearly every variety of German, from the light-hearted Austrian to the saturnine Berliner.

My experiences of German ménages led me to believe that there was, and is, more "give and take" between married folk in Germany than is the case here. Perhaps this is because the respective "lines" of man and wife are more clearly defined in the Fatherland than in these islands, and therefore seldom cross one another. The Hausherr is the bread-earner—the Hausfrau, so to speak, the bread-maker. He provides the income, she lays it out, all but a certain sum which he retains for pocket-money and expends chiefly at his Kneipe—that is to say, at the beer-shop, in which he absorbs his modest refreshers nightly, plays his game of chess, billiards, or "sixty-six," and talks de omnibus rebus et quibusdam aliis with his particular cronies. In every large German city there is more than one Kneipe, frequented by clerks, skilled artisans, employés of shopkeepers, and such small social deer, to which the wives of the habitués have access; and many a decent German woman, having neither children nor servants to demand her constant supervision at home, spends her evenings in the beer-house with her husband, doing knitting or needlework in his vicinity, and listening to his and his friends' conversation, without, perhaps, exchanging a dozen sentences with "her man" for three or four hours at a stretch. Whilst I and mine were living in Berlin my wife employed a washerwoman for several consecutive years, who confided to her that ever since her marriage she (the washerwoman) had accompanied her husband—a light porter—every night to his Kneipe, where she sate near him and looked on while he played chess—at which, as I found out, he was extraordinarily expert. "When I am with him," she told my wife, "I know where he is during his off hours, which saves him from telling lies, me from perhaps groundless, perhaps well-founded jealousy, and both of us from countless disputes and quarrels. If I had missed accompanying him once, who knows where he might have gone, and what he might have done? I don't understand chess, and I don't like beer; but I take my sewing with me and sit quiet. The gracious lady would scarcely believe how much work I have got through at the Kneipe in the course of twenty-one years, during which I have never once had a serious row with my man, nor has he taken more than was good for him. He and his friends play their games for beer, and, as he is a first-class player, his drinks seldom cost him more than a penny or two a night, which we more than save in light and firing during the winter months. He is a real good husband, and I am so fond of him that I don't regret our childlessness; for, you see, if there were little ones at home I should have to stay in and mind them, and then I could not look after him, and then I should be a miserable creature." This worthy woman had been content to hold her tongue for more than three to four hours every night throughout some 7,600 successive evenings, whilst her husband played at least 40,000 games of chess and drank as many glasses of beer—diversions, or let us say mental and bodily refreshments, in which she took neither act nor part. Marriage was assuredly not a failure in her case; for she repeatedly assured my wife that she had been a perfectly happy woman, and that she would not exchange her wedded life for that even of the Empress Augusta!

German husbands, it may be said—and with truth—are rougher and ruder in manner to their wives before strangers than Englishmen usually are; I speak, of course, of the middle classes. It is undeniable that they contradict them flatly without hesitation, whenever they happen to disagree with them. But there is not much in that; for contradiction is a national habit in Germany. Germans contradict one another, and foreigners as well, whenever they get a chance, for they love discussion, and positively wallow in controversy. How deeply ingrained in them is this custom may be gathered from one of their own favourite proverbs; "No two Germans can agree, even about the colour of Barbarossa's beard." When a German abruptly counters some casual assertion, put forward by his wife, with the uncivil remark, "Es ist gar nicht wahr!" (It is absolutely not true) he merely signifies that he thinks otherwise; the form in which he expresses his dissent from her allegation appears offensive to our apprehensions, but not to his, nor to hers. Perhaps, too, the use of the familiar "thee and thou" between husband and wife engenders a mutual lack of consideration for one another's feelings or susceptibilities. According to copy-book lore, "too much familiarity breeds contempt." Nevertheless, I have found my married German friends and acquaintances, as a rule, very good to one another, and wonderfully tolerant of their respective cronies, the women being laudably civil to their husband's "Kneipe-Cameraden," and the men fairly polite to their wives' "Kaffee-Gesellschafterinnen." For it is quite a mistake to imagine that all the amusement is on one side, and all the drudgery on the other. German ladies meet nearly as often at one another's rooms for a "Kaffee-Klatsch," or "coffee-chatter," as their spouses do at the "Stamm-Kneipe" for a skinful of beer, politics, philosophy, and literature. On the whole, the duties and pleasures of every-day life are very equitably divided between the sexes; and the best proof that they are so is the fact—which I do not believe one German lady of a hundred will dispute, "auf Ehrenwort"—that German women are content with their lot, and would not, if they could, have it otherwise than it actually is. They are brought up to attend to household business, most of them like it, many of them take an immense pride in their feats of cooking, needlework, cleaning, and, above all, thrift. They humour their husbands to the top of their bent, and consequently have their own way indoors to an extent that would astonish many a British Mrs. Naggleton. They are pretty hard mistresses to their servants, and no wonder; for German female domestics have learnt too much at school not to be more expert at cooking accounts than they are at preparing food and doing household work; whilst their military proclivities are always getting them into trouble in a country which keeps up an enormous standing army of vigorous youths between twenty and twenty-three years old—not to mention the wily "non-com.'s" and experienced "Reservisten," who lay siege to the virtue of cooks and chambermaids, with one eye on their charms and the other on their wages. The Hausfrau usually has a rough time with her female dependents, unfitted as they are for mere straightforward, thoroughgoing, menial work, by an education totally incommensurate with their social station; but she keeps these troubles to herself, makes her husband comfortable when he is at home, does not interfere with his going out, rules her roost with a firm, benevolent, and intelligent sway, and indulges freely in the pleasures that suit her—for the most part, I am bound to say, innocent ones enough.

Among the reasons why marriage is more rarely a failure in Germany than in England is the greater time-duration of betrothal engagements, and the greater licence in the way of going about together without the chronic or incidental "gooseberry" accorded to young affianced people. These facilities for unrestricted interchange of ideas enable German "Verlobten" to become more intimately acquainted with one another's characters, tempers, and ways of thinking than is possible to British "engaged" youths and maidens. Freedom of intercourse, such as permits ardent lovers to spend many hours in one another's society without surveillance, has its drawbacks, of course. German betrothals often last for years and come to nothing—sometimes their results are extremely unsatisfactory, and even fatally damaging to the reputation and matrimonial prospects of at least one of the betrothed parties. But these accidents have naught to do with matrimony, and do not affect the general correctness of the assumption that marriage is not a failure in Germany. The act of betrothal, moreover, is a legal one, hedged round with responsibilities of a very serious character, rendering its rupture or renunciation, unless mutual, a reproach and a disgrace. If a man or woman die whilst the "Verlobungs-Akt" is in force, the survivor is entitled to inherit a certain proportion of the deceased person's property. As a rule, the indiscretions attributable to youth, passion, and propinquity are honourably atoned for by marriage; and this fact minimises the disadvantages of German betrothals, without in the least abating their advantages, the chief of which is that they materially increase the chances of matrimonial happiness.

Another contributor to this "consummation devoutly to be wished" is the custom, prevalent throughout Germany, of putting aside a certain annual sum in the household budget for amusements, and of enjoying in common—I mean between husband and wife—the recreations thus provided for. The Germans are a theatre-going, beer-garden-frequenting, cheap-excursion-making people. They take their pleasure sociably and collectively from a family point of view, a great deal more out-of-doors than we do, and consequently do not bore one another nearly so much. Living, cæteris paribus, on much smaller incomes than those expended in English households, they devote a small percentage of their means to pastime of one sort or another, chiefly theatrical and musical performances; and it is surprising what an amount of entertainment can be bought for very little money in a country where prices of admission to theatres and concert rooms are less than half what they are here, and where gratis musical performances abound, of good quality and sufficient duration to content those who attend them. These entertainments, besides amusing Fritz and Lottchen while they last, supply subjects of conversation, of criticism, and of the difference of opinion in which every true-born German takes such a deep and inexhaustible delight.

Finally, it must be admitted that many marriages (though far fewer than in England) turn out badly and unhappily in Germany. But, on the other hand, the remedy for this particular evil is much easier there than here. There are seventeen admissible grounds for divorce recorded in the German Code, as against our two or three. Consequently, the matrimonial burden, when intolerable, can be thrown off readily and inexpensively—for law is delightfully cheap, as well as prompt, in the Fatherland. Marriage would become in this country a greater success than it actually is if our legislators were to take a leaf or two out of that section of the "Deutsches Gesetz-Buch," which deals with the paramountly important question of divorce.—I remain, Sir, yours obediently,

ANOTHER ANGLO-GERMAN.

London, Sept. 25.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—I and my friend John started life somewhere about the same time. We were youths together, employed by the same firm. Our positions were about the same; our aims and aspirations alike. We courted and eventually married. My friend married as fair and lovely a woman as man could well desire. I, not securing beauty, was fortunate in gaining a woman endowed with a large amount of common sense.

Eleven years have passed since that time. My friend has a family of four, I one of five children. Our union in both cases was one of pure affection. The question of pecuniary interest was not considered, because we both married dowerless maidens. All went well with us both the first year or so of our married lives. At times my friend had a misgiving that his wife was not quite the woman he had known or believed her to be in the happy days of courtship. He feared she gave way to drink, and yet scarce dare suggest it. A little while, however, and the dreaded truth came upon him with a shock as painful as can come to a trusting and loving husband. From that time his marriage was a failure. Every kindness, every consideration and persuasion have been in vain. In the years that have elapsed since the unhappy truth was revealed to him his home has twice been broken up; his wife is now but a wreck of her former self, drunken, dissolute, idle, reckless; his children in rags, dragged up midst all the wretched example of such a mother.

My own case is happily the brighter side of the picture. Linked to a wife, steady, thrifty, careful, a tender mother and a generous friend, not alone am I the better for it, but amidst the friends we possess there are those ready to draw the moral from our happy home and to strive to make their own more so. Our children, too, taught from their mother's knee those precepts which, making them thoughtful and loving children in the present, will, God willing, make them good citizens, good men and women in every way in the future. The world will be the richer for such, who, in their turn, will, I trust, afford examples worthy of emulation by the generation that will grow up around them. Marriage has not, so far, been a failure with us, nor with the foundation of true and sincere affection upon which our union was built is there any reason why it ever should be.

The secret of success in the married state is not far to seek—it is the home training. Children trained in a due sense of the responsibility that will one day devolve upon them; reared amidst example from their parents worthy to be copied and remembered; courtship carried on with the consent and advice of parents or guardians; a welcome in their respective homes, instead of parading the streets to enjoy each other's company—these conditions tend largely to ensure success when courtship is terminated by marriage.

Men and women reared as I have suggested will not enter upon so solemn a step as matrimony without due reflection. And what are the essentials? A pure affection, perfect confidence in each other, a strong resolution to bear with each other; as far as possible they should understand their respective dispositions, encourage the good and eradicate the evil.

These are but a few hints amongst the many that have been offered, but they may not be unworthy of consideration, since they are founded upon experience.—Yours, &c.,

A HAPPY MARRIED MAN.

Walthamstow, Sept. 24.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—Many of your correspondents apparently agree that one of the most important among the causes of matrimonial failure is the haste with which people so often take upon themselves the burden and responsibilities of married life. I suppose it will be admitted that rational beings must usually have some reason or motive for this seemingly unaccountable anxiety to renounce that freedom which most people allow to be an unmixed blessing. Being only a woman, I dare not venture even to guess at the lofty reasonings of the masculine mind; but, simply looking at the woman's side of the question, I think it is scarcely any exaggeration to say that nearly 50 per cent. of the girls who accept the first man who proposes to them, without caring one scrap about him personally, do so simply from a morbid horror of becoming that dreaded and despised thing, an old maid. They have been carefully taught to regard such a fate as the greatest misfortune they could look forward to, and to associate in their mind the idea of "single blessedness" with ill-natured gossip and stocking-knitting, bad temper and cats—for every one knows that these four things are essential to the existence of the typical spinster, and she could no more flourish without them than could a well-known typical gentleman of the Middle Ages inspire sufficient terror without horns! Now, in the latter half of the 19th century, which boasts itself so enlightened, such old-fashioned notions seem out of place, and it is time for girls to learn that an "old maid" is much the same woman she would have been had she married—no worse, no better, and in many respects, no doubt, far happier. Old bachelors, who are often selfish and disagreeable (though, of course, there are brilliant exceptions to prove the rule) are thus regarded, why not old maids? People refuse to believe that the latter are contented with their lot in life, although there is every reason to think that a large majority have made it their special choice, and preferred their independence to the too doubtful chance of obtaining domestic bliss in married life. Now, it seems to me that if young girls could be persuaded to regard us poor spinsters, if not with respect, at least with less contempt, one motive for hasty marriages, and that a not inconsiderable one, would gradually disappear, and with it, I trust, some of the "failures" also. In conclusion, Sir, allow me to subscribe myself (what I cannot induce any of my friends to believe me), yours, &c.,

A PERFECTLY CONTENTED OLD MAID.

Swansea, Sept. 24.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—I was much struck with a letter amongst the correspondence on the above subject by one signing himself "A Social Outcast." If you will permit me, I will give you my own painful experience? Some twelve years ago I married a lady whom I thought to be a fairly good-tempered and agreeable companion, which, I am bound to say, she was mostly, but at times, periodically as it seemed, she became, for no good reason, so sulky and perverse that I could not stay in the same room with her. If thwarted in the merest trifle it was quite sufficient to throw her into one of these moods, when she would sulk for days. Now, I will own that my temper is none of the mildest, though I have as loving a disposition as is to be found, and would always when in the wrong admit it, and ask forgiveness if I had said any harsh things. You may be sure, therefore, these fits were very hard to bear, and I think no one will be surprised if I did lose my temper. One day, some eight or nine years ago, she went away, and I have never heard from her from that day to this. Now, I ask any reasonable person if mine is not also one of those cases in which legislation ought to step in and pass a law that where there has been desertion, for say five years—the deserted one ought to be free to marry again even without a divorce, or any expensive or public proceedings. And I also think, with so many of your correspondents, that by all means children born out of wedlock should be legitimate.

Hoping that we shall not have to wait long for more righteous laws in these respects, I am, Sir, yours truly,

A DESERTED ONE.

Torquay, Sept. 24.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—I beg to differ with "An Observant Barmaid." Marriages in this business are not so rare as she imagines. Out of five young ladies in this hotel, two are engaged and will soon be married. Three of my most intimate friends, who were barmaids, are married to men in good positions, and three happier homes could not possibly be. I think one reason is, the girls had such a good opportunity before marriage of studying the whims and fancies of the male sex, which makes them more ready to humour and submit to them.

Of course there are barmaids and barmaids. I, for one, have nothing to say against the men. I have always received the greatest respect and kindness from them, with the exception of one or two cases.

About a week ago one of your correspondents hinted that barmaids do not make good wives. I have often wondered why the British public have not taken up the cudgels for barmaids as well as they have for lady clerks, milliners, and others. We are not all bad, believe me, Sir. Many of us come of good family, but are thrown upon the world without father, mother, or brother to protect us. Yet we manage to keep ourselves as pure and straight as if we were beneath the shelter of our own homes. The life is not an easy one at the best, and I do think we are entitled to as much sympathy as other girls who earn their own living.—Yours respectfully,

Liverpool, Sept. 24. ANOTHER BARMAID.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—As a family medical man of many years' experience, I fear that I must give it as my opinion that marriage very often is a failure, and a great one too. I see only one thing the State can do to improve this, and that is to abolish actions for breach of promise, which ever must be fertile causes of misery by compelling unsuitable people to marry, or by putting a money value on the blighted affections of a woman who is only too fortunate to escape marrying a man who ceases to care about her.

For the rest, the parents of one generation are to a great extent responsible for the bad marriages of the next. Children who are well and conscientiously brought up are the most likely people to make good husbands and wives, especially if they are able to mate with others who have been equally well brought up, but they are somewhat difficult to find. Of course parents who bring up their children well are likely to be careful in choosing acquaintances for them, but even they cannot always see into their neighbours' family cupboards. Besides this, their children will often choose for themselves. Is it not possible very often to predict that a marriage will be unhappy, simply because you know that one of the parties has been badly brought up?

However, I consider that there is a great power in the hands of the wife, namely, that of fascination, which is simply irresistible if she uses it discreetly. But let her be untidy, disposed to scold, and to discuss the most private domestic matters with her friends, and she will stand a chance of alienating even the best of husbands. I regret to say that I have myself been unhappy in marriage, and that I am separated from my wife, and probably it would be almost impossible to find an instance where a person had more right to a divorce than I have, short of the ordinary legitimate grounds for a divorce. Still, hard as my own case is, I am sure it would be a very bad thing for society if divorces were much more easily obtainable than at present.—I am, Sir, yours, M. D.

Finchley, Sept. 24.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—It is a great pity that it should be taken for granted that what "A Maid of Kent" says about her desire to "get engaged" is true of any large proportion of our sex. She describes herself and a number of sisters as equipped with all the arts of attraction, and provided with surroundings conducive to courtship, and bewails openly the scarcity of men likely to appreciate her. Such a girl I consider a traitor to her sex. It is no wonder that men think so lightly of us, and that we are sneered at on every side, when such are the avowed sentiments of one of ourselves. We could understand "A Maid of Kent's" desire to "get engaged" and married if she were in love, or required a protector, or was in need of a comfortable home. Circumstances of this sort explain many if not most marriages. But why on earth "A Maid of Kent," justified by none of these excuses for taking a husband, should desire to rush into matrimony, with all the obligations, restrictions, and irksome duties it entails, I am at a loss to conceive.

That most of us do not sympathise with "A Maid of Kent" I am quite certain. Nine out of ten girls that I know would not contemplate marriage at all if it were not that marriage seems to be the easiest way of providing for their future. This accounts for the numbers of charming girls we see mated with loutish and brutal husbands. The time comes to most girls when a choice must be made between matrimony and the hard endeavour to support themselves in a hard world. Of the two evils they choose the former, which they imagine to be the less.

To suppose that the majority of young unmarried women are anxious to marry in order to gain some prestige in the eyes of their fellow-creatures argues a great ignorance of the sex in general. In most marriages there is—there must be—a considerable condescension on the woman's part. Why should she—refined, sensitive, unselfish, sympathetic, cultured, thrilled in every fibre by indignation at injustice or brutality, enthusiastic in all good—why should such a creature stoop to mate with a being at his best cast in a far coarser mould than herself, if it be not that she is driven to it by sad necessity?

If every girl knew her future comfortably provided for there would be few marriages except for love, and consequently few that could be considered failures. Believe me, no sensible and spirited English girl fears to become what is vulgarly called an "old maid," she fears poverty, hard work, and loneliness in old age—these are the terrors that impel her to "take the first man that offers." Otherwise, she would remain content, and free, and proud "in single blessedness," and not add another to the list of those victims whose miseries seem to confirm the assertion that marriage is a failure.—I am, dear Sir, yours truly,

Farnham, Sept. 24. BRITOMART.

TO THE EDITOR OF "THE DAILY TELEGRAPH."

SIR—One of your correspondents upon "Is Marriage a Failure?" writes that there are plenty of girls with a little money who would be very pleased to get married, but the difficulty is how to be introduced to these very eligible women. Perhaps this is true in some cases, but I would like to give this gentleman correspondent a few hints. If, as he says, he cannot afford to marry a penniless girl, I would beg of him to refrain from making love to her, unless he thinks of marrying her. Men have the advantage of us women in more ways than one. I will give you, for example, the case of a friend. Not many months ago a gentleman who visited her home made arrangements to meet her after business and take her out. He told her he loved her, but did not make a formal offer of marriage, though he led her to think he was in earnest. She, I am sorry to say, accepted his intentions as such, when suddenly he disappeared. She wrote to him, and for an answer he promises to be "a brother to her." Now, can one be surprised at that girl losing her faith in men and becoming sceptical when she hears of a man's love? (though, I am very pleased to say, all men are not alike; we have some good men in the world). If I were a man I would scorn to marry a girl for her money. Men who can make love to one girl and marry another for her money are a disgrace to their sex, and I only hope I may be spared coming in contact with such, for I am

A GIRL WITHOUT MONEY.

The Court.

BALMORAL, SEPT. 25.

The Queen drove out yesterday morning, attended by the Hon. Harriet Phipps, and afterwards went out, attended by the Dowager Lady Churchill.

In the afternoon her Majesty, accompanied by Princess Alice of Hesse, and attended by the Dowager Lady Churchill, drove out, and honoured Sir Algernon and Lady Borthwick with a visit at Invercauld.

Prince Henry of Battenberg, attended by Colonel Clerk, drove to Glen Muick, and joined Mr. Mackenzie in a grouse drive.

Earl Cadogan and Lord Rowton, C.B., had the honour of dining with the Queen and the Royal family.

Miss Minnie Cochrane has arrived at the Castle.

MARLBOROUGH HOUSE, SEPT. 25.

The Princess of Wales, accompanied by the Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud, arrived at Marlborough House to-day from Gmünden, Austria.

The Hon. Lady Hardinge, Miss Knollys, and Colonel Clarke were in attendance.

TO-DAY'S ARRANGEMENTS.

Racing.—Newmarket First October Meeting (second day).
Meeting of the Jockey Club, at Newmarket (after the races).
Athletics.—Licensed Victuallers' Fête at Kennington Oval.
Archery.—Royal Toxophilite, bye-day, West Berks Handicap, at 12.0 (Colonel Lavins), 216 arrows at 100 yards.

Her Royal Highness the Princess of Wales, with Princesses Louise, Victoria, and Maud, arrived at Sheerness yesterday morning from Flushing, in the Royal yacht Osborne. The Royal party disembarked at Port Victoria Pier, where they were received by the Commander-in-Chief at the Nore and the principal officers of the port. The Princess and her daughters proceeded to London by special train. Royal salutes were fired on the arrival of the yacht by the war vessels in Sheerness Harbour. The Princess of Wales and her daughters leave Marlborough House this evening for Abergeldie, Aberdeenshire, where they will be joined by the Prince of Wales on his return from Austria in October.

The Duke of Cambridge arrived in York on Monday afternoon, and drove to Fairfield, the seat of Mr. R. C. Vyner. Yesterday he held a review on Knavesmire of the 10th Hussars and the 1st Battalion of the York and Lancaster Regiment. Prince Albert Victor, who was in command of one of the squadrons of Hussars, put the men through various movements, and was congratulated by the Commander-in-Chief, General Daniels, and others. The Duke spoke in high terms of the manner in which the men went through their work.

Although no official statement has been made on the subject, it is generally believed that the betrothal of Prince George, the second son of the King of Greece, with Princess Marguerite, the second daughter of the Duc de Chartres, will soon be announced.—Reuter.

Last night's Gazette announces that the Queen has been pleased to confer the Albert Medal of the Second Class upon Lieutenant Pulteney Malcolm, 4th Goorkha Regiment, in recognition of the conspicuous gallantry displayed by him on June 10, 1887, in attempting to save the life of a comrade who had fallen over a precipice, near Dalhousie, East India.

The Earl of Northbrook visited Galway on Monday, with Chief Justice Morris, and afterwards went to Lord Clanricarde's estate at Loughrea, where he had an interview with Mr. Toner, the agent of the estate. His Lordship dined with the Roman Catholic Coadjutor-Bishop.

On inquiry at Carlton House-terrace yesterday, it was stated that Lord Ardilaun, who has been suffering from a severe bronchial attack, with intermittent fever, is much better, and is rapidly regaining strength.

The Grand Duke and Duchess of Saxe-Meiningen arrived at Euston Station yesterday morning from Dublin, by the Irish mail, and proceeded to the Grand Hotel.

Yesterday the Home Secretary, who is on a visit to Birmingham, was present at the opening, by Lord Leigh, of the new police-court at Sutton Coldfield.

Mr. Goschen will arrive at Aberdeen on the 30th prox., and in the evening will address a public meeting; on the following day he will receive a number of addresses from Liberal Unionist associations, and will be present at a banquet in his honour given by the local Unionists.

The Very Rev. the Dean of Norwich, Dr. Goulburn, has placed his resignation in the hands of Lord Salisbury, and it has been accepted by his Lordship.

A Reuter's telegram dated Melbourne, Sept. 25, states: "Rains have recently fallen in Victoria, and there has been a heavy downpour in New South Wales, where rain is urgently needed."

The Parnell Defence Fund amounts to £3,950.

The second great horse fair during the current year will be held at Brussels on Oct. 27. It has been notified officially, that from 1889 two annual horse-fairs will take place, one in the spring, beginning on the first Saturday in May, and the other in the autumn, commencing on the last Saturday in October.

THE 81-TON GUNS AT DOVER.—The Central News states: "It has transpired in connection with the recent experiments with the two 81-ton guns mounted on the Admiralty Pier, that the reason why only four shots were fired was that the last round, in which the guns were fired together, caused serious injury to the turret. The damage done to one side of the erection is estimated at £1,000. The whole of the very massive blocks of stone on the seaward side were burst up, and with the aid of a telescope some twenty-five yards can be seen from shore hanging over the side of the pier. It is also stated that the guns sustained considerable injury. This report, however, requires confirmation."

A WONDERFUL MEDICINE.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

ARE admitted by thousands to be worth above a Guinea a Box for Bilious and Nervous Disorders, such as Wind and Pain in the Stomach, Sick Headache, Giddiness, Fullness and Swelling after Meals, Dizziness and Drowsiness, Cold Chills, Flushings of Heat, Loss of Appetite, Shortness of Breath, Costiveness, Scurvy, Blotches on the Skin, Disturbed Sleep, Frightful Dreams, and all Nervous and Trembling Sensations, &c. The first dose will give relief in 20 minutes. This is no fiction, for they have done it in thousands of cases. Every sufferer is earnestly invited to try one box of these pills and they will be acknowledged to be WORTH A GUINEA A BOX.

For females of all ages these pills are invaluable, as a few doses of them carry off all gross humours, open all obstructions, and bring about all that is required. No female should be without them. There is no medicine to be found to equal Beecham's Pills for removing any obstruction or irregularity of the system. If taken according to the directions given with each box they will soon restore females of all ages to sound and robust health.

For a weak stomach, impaired digestion, and all disorders of the liver they act like magic, and a few doses will be found to work wonders upon the most important organs in the human machine. They strengthen the whole muscular system, restore the long-lost complexion, bring back the keen edge of appetite, and arouse into action, with the rosebud of health, the whole physical energy of the human frame. These are facts admitted by thousands, embracing all classes of society, and one of the best guarantees to the nervous and debilitated is Beecham's Pills have the largest sale of any Patent Medicine in the world. Full directions are given with each box. Sold by all Druggists and Patent Medicine Dealers in the United Kingdom.

Prepared only and sold wholesale and retail by the Proprietor, T. Beecham, Chemist, St. Helen's, in boxes at 1s. 1½d. and 2s. 9d. each. Sent post free for 15 or 36 stamps.
